Major Battle For Nanking Is Reported Shaping Up

750,000 Soldiers Said to Be Moved Into Decisive Fight; Admit Suchow Loss

(From Press Dispatches) Nanking, Dec. 3.—A decisive battle which may determine the fate of Nanking was reported imminent today and may be already under way.

United Press dispatches said nearly a million men were locked in battle between Suchow and the rail hub of Pengpu with the Nationalists sending in 150,000 reinforcements.

Authoritative government military quarters meanwhile confirmed the abandonment of Suchow and its seizure by the Communists.

These sources said the comparatively small Red force moved in from the northeast to find the supplies of that once-vital base destroyed.

United Press reports painted this picture of the situation: Three Nationalist army groups driving north from the rail hub at Pengpu were reported battling 18 Communist columns on the banks of the Hwai River, 120 air-line miles north of here.

Three more government army groups, fighting southward from their reportedly captured base at Suchow, threatened the Communist rear.

The Defense Ministry reported the advancing Chinese forces had routed four Communist columns in the western sector of the Hwai River front, clearing the vital Nanking-Suchow line of Reds from Pengpu for 30 miles north to Kuchan.

Government sources emphasized that final outcome of the Hwai River battle still was in doubt, with the 14 remaining Red columns still offering fierce resistance.

AP Report Differs Associated Press reports indicated the main battle was not yet joined.

The AP said Communist columns on the Hwai River line 100 miles from Nanking swung back north today to meet the threat of large Chinese government forces marching south from Suchow.

Collision of these armies of more than 100,000 combatants on each side at some still-to-be-determined point was expected to produce decisive results.

The AP said pro-government dispatches from the front gave this picture: The government garrison abandoned Suchow December 1 and has moved possibly 40 miles south, confronted only by small, Communist holding forces.

This former Suchow garrison is in three army groups, the Second, Thirteenth and Sixteenth, totaling about 250,000 men but estimated to have 110,000 effective fighting troops.

Its evident mission is to make contact with the government Twelfth Army Group of 100,000. See CHINA, Page 3, Column 4.

10-Pounder Shown To Prove Truman Is Turnip Expert

Boonville, Mo., Dec. 3.—W. B. Miller today displayed proof that President Truman "knows his turnips."

Miller read about the President's remark last summer that July 25 was a good date to sow the vegetable in Missouri, or the following day if the date falls on Sunday, as it did this year.

So Miller, a Democrat, planted his turnips on July 26.

Today he showed one whopper that weighed 10 pounds and measured 28 inches around. Another tilted the beam at 7 pounds.

He said the rest of the crop was unusually large.

A few tickets for the luncheon are still available at book stores.

Eric Johnston Will Appear At Book Luncheon

In the early editions of last Thursday's Washington Post there was an announcement stating that Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, would be unable to speak at the next Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon.

Broad Program Adopted Protestant Council Indorses Complete End of Segregation

By Martha J. Hall Post Reporter

Cincinnati, Dec. 3.—The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America today adopted a sweeping human rights declaration that calls for complete abolition of racial segregation.

The declaration calls for a non-segregated church and a non-segregated society and denounces "flagrant violation of human rights" as outraging every Christian feeling.

The human rights report was one of six adopted by the council as it elected Bishop John S. Stamm of Harrisburg, Pa., president on the final day of its biennial meeting.

The council, which is composed of 23 Protestant and 4 orthodox bodies, is the largest Protestant Church group, having 28 million members.

Its report not only approved President Truman's civil rights program, but went even further by enumerating a long list of human rights it declared were essential to the achievement of world order.

The report said: "It is for the state to embody these rights in its own legal system and to insure their observance in practice. It is for the churches to encourage the state fully to recognize these rights in law, but also, since the churches are under special obligation to obey God they must go beyond these requirements of law and encourage their members in conscientious endeavor to achieve these ends."

"Moral obligation is at the center of the Christian concept of human rights," the report asserted that "all of See RIGHTS, Page 12, Column 4.

Chest Drive Closes 26% Short of Goal $3,379,194 Pledged Is More Than Million Under Total Sought

The 1949 Community Chest drive officially closed last night, 26 per cent short of its goal of $4,566,790.

Campaign Chairman Chauncey G. Parker announced that $3,379,194 has been pledged by 316,918 sources—$1,187,995.15 less than "an honest appraisal of minimum needs."

Parker expressed a conviction that "more of the hospitalization needs of the medically indigent must be assisted by the tax funds of our District government and local and State governments in Maryland and Virginia."

He said "at least 100,000" wage earners in Greater Washington failed to respond to this year's drive.

He added that it is not yet too late to contribute and appealed to the missing 100,000 to add one more item to their Christmas shopping list, a contribution through the Federation for the Health, Welfare and Recreational needs of those of our neighbors in need of them during 1949.

Although the total raised this year is more than the $3,173,741 pledged at the end of the 1948 campaign, Parker said allocation to chest member agencies will be less than in 1948.

This is true, he said, because the hospitalization fund was doubled this year's quota to meet the critical shortage of funds in hospitals.

Parker said the answer to the problem is for local governments to make more money available for care of the medically indigent.

"And that must be done speedily," he added.

Sees Effect on Funds Use The chairman said he had been informed that present District policy of determining who is eligible to be treated with tax funds is so "tight-fisted" that "the increase in congressional appropriations for hospitalization cannot possibly be spent and used."

In the face of our over-all needs in health and welfare, this just doesn't make sense," he added.

"A liberalization of that intake policy would materially lessen the load on the federation hospitalization fund and make more available."

Called Worst Wave in 14 Years Counterfeit $10 and $20 Bills Flood New York and Chicago

By the United Press

Two counterfeit rings, one in New York and one in Chicago, are issuing large amounts of bogus $10 and $20 bills representing millions of dollars, it was disclosed yesterday.

Disclosure of the existence of two rings was made by the Secret Service after the Federal Reserve Bank of New York announced that a "substantial number" of nearly perfect copies of bank notes have been circulated throughout the greater New York area during the past few weeks in the biggest counterfeit operation in the United States in 14 years.

Bank officials warned shoppers, merchants and commercial banks to be on the lookout for the bogus bills, especially in the Christmas-buying rush.

The New York bank officials said fake money also has been found in Chicago, but a Secret Service spokesman here said there was no connection between the two operations.

He said the $10 and $20 bills passed off by the Chicago gang are not like those discovered in New York. If the two rings were working together, there would be no point in using different plates with which to print their "money."

The Chicago gang was said to have been active for several months. At first its product was found only in the Midwest. In the last two months, however, evidence of its operations has been found in Pacific Coast States, along the entire Eastern Seaboard and in the South.

Relatively little of the bogus money has turned up in Chicago, officials said. Two passers are under arrest, but the ring cannot be broken until the printing machinery is discovered.

The Federal Reserve Bank in New York said commercial banks See MONEY, Page 9, Column 1.

Union Fight May Keep Docks Idle

AFL Sailors Group Threatens to Halt West Coast Sailings As CIO Ends Strike

San Francisco, Dec. 3 (AP). The West Coast maritime strike ended officially at noon today. But there was no certainty that long-idled ships would sail in the immediate future.

No sooner did the last of the striking CIO and independent unions come to terms in their 93-day strike than a new maritime hitch developed in demands of the nonstriking AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific.

Harry Lundberg, head of the AFL-SUP, announced his men would sail no ships unless certain jurisdictional guarantees were acknowledged and contract wage provisions met.

He added his men would not return to work until a detailed agreement has been reached.

Specifically the AFL-SUP demanded guarantees the new CIO longshoremen and cooks contracts do not infringe on its jurisdiction over longshore rights on coastwise steam schooner crews, and over cooks and stewards on the Alaska steamship run.

Lundberg's position drew a threat of damage action for lost work by the CIO Longshoremen, who just last week settled their strike.

"Harry Lundberg of the SUP has pulled his usual stunt of trying to prevent maritime workers from returning to work to enjoy the gains they won in the strike," said a longshore statement.

"If he thinks he can get by with it he is wrong, and we will hit him with everything in the book."

The current three-month paralysis involving five maritime unions cost shipping the estimated staggering sum of $75 million dollars. In addition, 76 ships were turned back to the Maritime Commission by operators and it was considered questionable whether their 3200 seafaring jobs would again be available.

The last of the striking unions came to terms at 7 a. m. today after an all-night negotiating session. It was the CIO radio operators, who met to ratify the terms this afternoon.

The radiomen accepted a 10 per cent salary increase after demand-23 per cent.

House Group Probing Mich. Strike Violence

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 3 (AP).—A congressional subcommittee joined State officials today in investigation of a dawn raid Wednesday on two truck plants of the Shakespeare companies here.

Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.), headed here from Washington to question witnesses at a hearing Saturday.

Michigan Attorney General Eugene F. Black was one of the first witnesses subpoenaed by the Hoffman investigators. Black said he had "no idea" why he was asked to testify.

At the same time, Circuit Judge John Simpson of Jackson, Mich., set in motion the machinery of a one-man State grand jury. It was ordered by Governor Sigler.

An estimated 300 raiders swooped down on the two Shakespeare plants Wednesday, overturning cars, burning a truck, smashing equipment and injuring seven persons.

E. M. Swing Posts Bail

The 60-year-old president of the M. E. Swing Coffee Co. shot and wounded a former employee yesterday in the president's office at 1013 E. st. n.w., police reported.

The executive, Edward M. Swing, told police he fired at Malcolm B. Talbert, 30, of 1737 Minnesota ave. s.e., after a series of arguments and quarrels that had been going on for some time, when Talbert threatened him with a paperweight.

Talbert was wounded twice in the left thigh. He was treated at Emergency Hospital, then transferred to Mount Alto Veterans Hospital, in "satisfactory" condition.

Talbert told Emergency Hospital physicians he was shot "in an argument over money matters," but refused further details.

Police said Swing would not tell them what the "arguments and quarrels" between him and Talbert were about.

Talbert worked as a salesman for Swing until three years ago when he became a taxicab driver. Talbert's wife, Myrtle, an attractive brunette, is employed in a candy kitchen owned by Swing and connected with the coffee company property. Police said Talbert was drinking in the neighborhood shortly before the shooting, and was turned away at one taproom as having had enough.

Police said Swing told them Talbert had been annoying him earlier

Berlin Action Held Proof of Red Ill Faith U. S. Commander Employs Harsh Terms Yet; Rally Ejects Hecklers

(From Press Dispatches) Berlin, Dec. 3.—Col. Frank L. Howley, United States troop commander in Berlin, said today, after the Soviet backed the new rump Communist government in its sector of Berlin, that "Russia now stands naked and alone as a government whose word can not be trusted."

Howley's statement appeared in the United States Army weekly. The Berlin Observer, as fighting-mad Social Democrats in West Berlin tonight threw Communist invaders out of their election campaign rally and served defiant notice that they are "too tough" to bow to Red dictatorship.

The Social Democrat challenge followed a statement by rump regime Mayor Fritz Ebert at a press conference today that he was mayor of all parts of the city but that he would take orders only from Russia.

Won't Eject Westerners "As far as I am concerned the Soviet occupation authorities are the only responsible authorities," Ebert said. "The Western commandants can come and see me if they wish, but I will not go to them. I think they are democratic enough not to give me orders. But if they do, I will not carry them out."

Ebert added that Berlin was a part of the Soviet occupation zone. Howley's third tough statement this week went even further than his previous ones. Discussing the Soviet action backing the rump regime, he said:

"If anyone still believes the word of the Soviets can be relied upon, this last act should disillusion him. Russia has broken every agreement toward peace beginning with the Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam conferences and down to those reached in the Allied Control Authority and the Berlin command committee here."

Charges Kidnappings, Threats After the Communist Party lost the Berlin city election in October, 1946, Howley said, "a systematic program of terror implemented by kidnappings, intimidation and threats, was begun by the Communist Party at Soviet instigation."

Today's disorders in west Berlin apparently were a rebirth of the limited control of the vast Ruhr industries to the Germans. The French Assembly, mindful of the Ruhr's war-making potentialities, voted 377-181 Thursday night to repudiate any such action.

But Lovett made it clear to newsmen in Washington Thursday that the United States—while determined to prevent a rebirth of German military might—plans to go ahead with the program of limited German management as a stimulus to Germany's postwar recovery.

Bonnet said the French government's proposals called for: 1. Decartelization of the many German combines and corporations. See RUHR, Page 2, Column 1.

Death Watch of Nearly 4 Hours 2 Killers Reprieved, Escape Chair by 21-Minute Margin

By Charles E. Davis, jr. Post Reporter

Two condemned killers held hands with death for nearly four hours yesterday in District Jail and then received a reprieve until Tuesday or later—their twelfth stay.

The experience left them stunned and unrealizing. It left jail officials and reporters nervous and dry-mouthed.

Snatched from the embrace of the electric chair by the narrow margin of only 21 minutes through court maneuvers were Reginald J. Wheeler, 28, and Jesse James Patton, 23.

They were convicted of first degree murder in November, 1946, in the holdup slaying of Maurice L. Bernstein, Washington druggist.

The last-minute stay of execution was granted by the United States Court of Appeals after attorneys for the doomed men had fought a desperate delaying action in local courts.

Yesterday Wheeler and Patton were ready to die. As much as any man can, they had prepared themselves to meet it.

They had final visits from their families Thursday. At midnight they were led from cell block one in the jail to the condemned row cells, only a few feet from the chair.

Their heads were shaved and final meals eaten. The straps, electrodes and electrodes of the electric chair were given a final checkup.

Shortly after dawn they began to pray. Kindly faced Protestant ministers read softly from the Bible.

According to District law, electrocution must take place on the day of the execution. See EXECUTE, Page 8, Column 2.

Crusade in Europe Victory Gave Lie to Those Who Call Democracy Soft, Proved Joint Control Value

By Dwight D. Eisenhower XXVIII

In the summer of 1945, although our main effort was redeployment of troops, establishment of occupation, and execution of many minor tasks directly connected with our mission, we were also occupied in a professional sequel to the war—the study and evaluation of its lessons.

The material confronting us was monumental in its bulk and in its content unique. The campaigns in the Mediterranean and in Europe had no prior parallel in the history of warfare; throughout them, the United States Army had engaged in operations without comparable precedent since its establishment in 1775.

For the operations in Africa and Europe there had been involved the organization of a vast ground force. Built around 47 infantry divisions and their artillery, it included 16 armored divisions and four airborne divisions, a mountain division, four seaborne brigades for the operation of landing craft, besides amphibious and combat engineer units, brigade, and separate battalions of anti-aircraft units, field artillery and tank destroyer battalions by the score. Equally stupendous was the growth of American air strength in those two theaters; between our entry into the war and the German surrender our fighter planes had won superiority over the Luftwaffe and our bombers had penetrated every defense which the German had raised against them.

In all the campaigns, and particularly in western Europe, our guiding principle was to avoid at any cost the freezing of battle lines that might box down our troops in a pattern similar to the trench warfare of World War I.

At times in the conduct of any continental campaign there develops a strain upon supply lines that largely prohibits the continuance of heavy, decisive attacks; during such periods a certain degree of stabilization is unavoidable. But the Allied forces did not permit these periods of stabilization to develop into the long, dreary, and wasteful battles that led Europe white in World War I.

In addition to amphibious assault on an unprecedented scale, our forces had surmounted natural and fortified barriers that were believed invulnerable. In Sicily, Sicily, and Italy the terrain we encountered was lit by nature for defensive operations. In the Tunisian hills, on the shoulder of Mount Etna, and in the Apennines there were scores of vital points where a battalion could stop an army's advance.

France Offers Three-Point Plan for Ruhr Long-Term Controls Demanded to Remove Area's War Potential

France proposed a three-point plan to the United States last night to keep the Ruhr from serving again as a German war arsenal.

The French formula would continue international controls even after occupation troops have left Germany.

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet told newsmen the plan is "also in the interest of Germany—and I want to emphasize that because we want to see Germany's economy eventually integrated into the economy of Europe."

Bonnet presented the plan in a formal note to Undersecretary of State Lovett.

Earlier this week, France had objected vigorously to a British-American program to hand over limited control of the vast Ruhr industries to the Germans. The French Assembly, mindful of the Ruhr's war-making potentialities, voted 377-181 Thursday night to repudiate any such action.

But Lovett made it clear to newsmen in Washington Thursday that the United States—while determined to prevent a rebirth of German military might—plans to go ahead with the program of limited German management as a stimulus to Germany's postwar recovery.

Bonnet said the French government's proposals called for: 1. Decartelization of the many German combines and corporations. See RUHR, Page 2, Column 1.

Commission On Palestine Near Approval U. N. Vote Expected Today on 3-Nation Conciliation Group

Paris, Dec. 3 (AP).—The United Nations Political Committee tonight virtually approved a proposal setting up a three-nation Palestine conciliation commission but giving it no specific directives.

Wary committee delegates completed taking a paragraph-by-paragraph vote on the proposal, but delayed the final vote until Saturday when they can study the corrected text.

Adjournment came after three wrangling sessions today and tonight.

The 58-nation committee still must act on a Canadian suggestion calling upon the United States, Britain, France and Russia to select the three nations that will compose the conciliation commission.

The committee also must act on a Russian resolution demanding the withdrawal of all foreign troops and military personnel from Palestine; on a Syrian proposal for a single state in Palestine, which would have an Arab majority, and a Syrian request for an opinion by the International Court of Justice on the U. N. partition plan.

Earlier the United States abandoned all attempts to push definite ideas on Israel's boundaries through the General Assembly. A committee revolt continued today against British and American efforts to write directives on boundaries into the resolution. The delegates killed a British proposal that many opponents charged was See ISRAEL, Page 4, Column 3.

Pumpkin Contents Suggest Scores of Papers Were Taken; N. Y. Jury May Act

By Bert Andrews

Microfilms brought out of their hiding place in a hollowed-out pumpkin on his Maryland farm have been produced by Whittaker Chambers, it was revealed last night, and they strongly indicate that highly secret State and Navy Department information was obtained by him in the days when he was a Communist.

A statement from the Committee on Un-American Activities declared:

"These microfilms have been the object of a 10-year search by agents of the United States Government and provide definite proof of one of the most extensive espionage rings in the history of the United States."

"On the basis of the evidence now before the committee, it appears that conclusive proof has been established that secret documents of direct significance to our national security were fed out of the State Department by a member of the Communist underground to Whittaker Chambers, who at that time was operating as one of the Washington contacts for the Communist underground operating in America."

Evidence Startles Reporter The statement said the documents were given to Chambers "for the purpose of transmitting to Russian Communist agents."

The evidence—some of which has been seen by this reporter—is by far the most startling that has been yet brought to light as a result of the celebrated controversy involving Chambers' senior editor of Time magazine, and Alger Hiss former State Department official and now president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The evidence was obtained as a direct result of pre-trial procedure in the libel suit by Hiss against Chambers, brought because of Chambers' charge that Hiss was a member of a Communist "apparatus" in Washington in the mid-1930s.

It is evidence that will be placed before a New York Federal grand jury, probably next Wednesday, and will most certainly give the jury reasons to ponder these additional questions: How did Chambers get the information—including plans of technical instruments highly valuable in war—to Chambers?

Was it transmitted to Soviet Russia? Did it give away secret codes by the State Department and the Navy Department?

No word or hint was given to-night, however, as to the person or persons in the State Department and the Navy who supplied the microfilmed documents to Chambers.

One illustration of how "hot" the microfilm is lies in the fact that a letter-sized reproduction made of some of them—the job of enlarging them is still going on—make a stack 3 to 4 feet high.

Mundt Flying Back Here Other illustrations are these: 1. Representative Earl E. Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, is flying back from his home in Madison, S. Dak., to bring the facts to light as a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Informed in detail in an hour-long telephone conversation with Robert E. Stripling, chief committee investigator, Mundt—who'll be a Senator in the next Congress—said: "These documents are of such startling and significant importance and reveal such a vast network of Communist espionage within the State Department that they far exceed anything yet brought before the committee in its 10-year history."

2. Mundt sent a wireless message to Representative Richard M. Nixon, Republican, of California, vacation-bound to Panama on the liner Panama. Mundt asked Nixon to leave the ship by plane if possible. See CHAMBERS, Page 4, Col. 4.

Top Czechs Plan Mission To Moscow

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—A Czechoslovak government delegation led by Premier Antanin Zapotocky plans to leave for Moscow within the next few days on a mission of obvious importance, well-informed sources said today.

Included in the delegation, informants said, will be Foreign Minister Vladimir Clementis, Finance Minister Jaromir Dolansky and other cabinet ministers. Clementis returned yesterday from the United Nations meeting in Paris.

It was believed the mission may result in emergence soon of some form of "eastern union" to oppose the western European alliance against Communist encroachment.

A special cabinet meeting was held today, and it was believed the Moscow mission was discussed.

North Atlantic Treaty Terms Arrive Here

Early resumption of the North Atlantic security talks was foreshadowed yesterday with the arrival of the terms under which five western European powers seek a defensive alliance with the United States and Canada.

The British Embassy said it finally has received preliminary draft of the treaty proposals on which the European states agreed to invite American and Canadian participation.

American officials have been waiting for the document so that they can begin consultations among themselves on the role, if any, to be played by the United States in the proposed security bloc.

It is understood that copies of the draft will be submitted to President Truman and his military, political and economic advisers, here after it has been studied by representatives of the five European powers.

The United States also is expected to begin consultations promptly with Canadian diplomats here and with envoys of the European states—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

If the United States decides finally to join in the pact, President Truman presumably will submit recommendations to Congress for legislation authorizing the alliance and measures to put it into effect. The European states reportedly are seeking large-scale deliveries of American arms to back up the defensive pact.

France Agrees On Colonies Plan for Italy

Paris, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—France has reached almost complete agreement with the United States and Britain on the future of Italy's African empire, a foreign office spokesman said today.

The spokesman said his government has abandoned previous reservations, especially its opposition to quick action, in order to prevent a "grave split between Italy and Britain."

He described France's position on the territories in North and East Africa as follows:

Somaliand: Return to Italy under United Nations trusteeship.

Eritrea: Eastern part to Ethiopia, western part undecided.

Libya: Division in three parts, with west Libyan Cyrenaica going to Britain under U. N. trusteeship, east Libyan Tripolitania returning to Italy under trusteeship, and the tiny southeastern territory of Fezzan going to France by annexation or under trusteeship.

in the Ruhr—"a very important point."

2. Denazification of management of the Ruhr industries.

3. Continued Allied control over production of coal, steel and coke industries and a voice in distribution of investments these factories might make.

Bonnet made it plain the controls France proposes are intended to remain in effect even after occupation troops are withdrawn from Germany.

France has insisted that Germany must never regain full control of the Ruhr which provided 70 per cent of Hitler's armaments.

"We think the proposals we are making now are extremely moderate," the French Ambassador told reporters. "We think they are in the interest of Europe and also the United States."

The French note came but two days after the State Department sent France a note which turned down French objections to the British-American plan.

Rome, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza today accused Russia's Balkan allies—Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania—of breaking the peace treaties limiting their armed forces. He told the Chamber of Deputies some important rearmament was proceeding with Russian aid.

His charge followed by two days similar assertions in the British House of Commons by C. P. Mayhew, undersecretary for foreign affairs, that Bulgaria and Romania have increased their forces beyond the 1946 treaty limits and that Hungary is planning an increase.

Mayhew did not give figures, but Sforza declared on the basis of "precise information."

Hungary is to have 85,000 men in the armed forces by June 1946, instead of the treaty limit of 65,000. Bulgaria's army and border guard totals 86,000, instead of the 55,000 provided by treaty. In addition, she has a militia of 120,000 "labor troops" fluctuating between 40,000 and 50,000, and 450 military planes instead of the 90 allowed by treaty.

Romania has 150,000 men in the army instead of the 120,000 fixed in the treaty, plus a frontier gendarmerie of 20,000 and other police forces.

Neither Mayhew nor Sforza mentioned Yugoslavia, which is in the bad graces of the Communist International Information Bureau.

Sforza asserted that Russia relieved Hungary of 50 per cent of her reparations obligations on the specific condition that "a strong percentage of this be used for military spending."

He charged that a Soviet military mission of 120 men headed by a Russian general "presides over this rearmament, for which it seems that Soviet materials and equipment were recently sent."

"We are confronted with a collective program of rearmament in which in various countries close to us all war industries have received a questionnaire from their military ministries concerning the time and means required to bring their war production back to the level of 1944," he concluded.

Berlin Rump Regime Bans Chewing Gum

Berlin, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The Communist rump government in the Soviet sector of Berlin banned chewing gum in its first decree, German newspapers said today.

They said a German reporter was stopped by police in the Soviet sector while he was munching his gum and told: "Chewing gum is American. It is against the law here."

until that day when this power retreats which does not belong on European soil."

The rally roared its approval of the assertions by Frau Louise Schroeder, acting mayor, that "this is the most fateful election in Berlin's history. Whoever didn't realize that until now must see it after the Communist putsch."

(She was referring to this week's seizure of the city hall by the Communist hand-picked council and mayor.)

The lift, with a return to better weather after a bad week, brought 4414 tons of supplies—considerably over the minimum required—into Berlin in the past 24 hours.

Commenting on the Soviet military administration's nod of approval extended last night to the rump government, a British spokesman said:

"When the dummy has been brought on to the stage, it is difficult for the ventriloquist to stay in the wings indefinitely."

ECA Chief Begins Flying World Tour

Economic Cooperation Administration Chief Paul Hoffman left last night on a round-the-world flying tour with the praises of congressional leaders ringing in his ears.

Just before leaving, Hoffman spent three hours at a meeting of the watchdog committee of Congress, set up last spring to keep check on the operations of ECA.

The meeting was private, but afterward the acting chairman, Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), told reporters:

"My own feeling is, considering the difficulties and handicaps, that ECA has made remarkably good progress. Considering the gigantic size of the project, it is an amazing accomplishment."

May Ask Some Changes

Smith said his committee might "possibly" recommend changes in existing legislation, but not until after the assembly of Congress. He indicated that the committee had not been critical of Hoffman or of other ECA officials who came to the meeting with him.

Hoffman himself suggested one important change by telling reporters that some other agency should take over ECA's present job of getting strategic materials from the ECA countries of Europe and their colonial territories.

"It is of extreme importance," he said, "that some Government agency, such as the Treasury, be given the authority to commit funds for the long-range procurement of strategic materials for stockpiling."

The act of Congress setting up ECA called for a four-year program, but Hoffman argued that the need for strategic materials would cover a longer period. Under the act, European countries getting American help are expected to set aside the equivalent of about 200 million dollars in their local currencies to provide strategic materials for the United States.

Ship Problem Outlined

To the watchdog committee Hoffman outlined another problem—the provision of the ECA act which requires that half of the relief and recovery supplies sent from the United States must travel in American ships where available, and at market prices. This provision is estimated to have cost the American taxpayer—at least 50 million dollars in the eight months of ECA's operation, because of the higher charges on American ships.

Hoffman told the committee, according to Senator Smith, that shipping bottlenecks had been caused by the requirement to send half the cargoes on American vessels.

His first stop on his world-wide tour will be in London, where he will talk to British officials on the continued dismantling of factories in western Germany. A committee of industrialists headed by George Humphrey of Cleveland is now in Germany, trying to discover which plants scheduled for removal to other countries could be of greater help if they were kept in Germany.

From England Hoffman will fly

On New Pact World Wheat Parley Slated Here Jan. 25

The principal wheat-producing countries of the world decided last night to hold a conference in Washington January 25 to negotiate a new international wheat agreement.

The decision was announced by the State Department after a meeting of an 11-nation preparatory committee, made up of representatives of the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, Egypt, India, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Brazil.

The number of countries to be invited was not specified; presumably all countries that are members of the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations will take part.

The proposed wheat agreement would replace one negotiated early this year, but never ratified. That one expired because the American Congress did not act on it at the last session, despite an urgent recommendation from President Truman that it do so.

The old agreement was for a period of five years. It was designed to divide the world wheat market among the major exporting nations, and set up a system of maximum and minimum prices to protect growers and consumers. It would have assured the United States a market for 168 million dollars a year, with a guarantee of $1.85 a bushel for the first year.

Because of the big increase in wheat production this season, there have been reports that any new agreement would set a lower price. That is expected to be the biggest point of contention at the forthcoming conference.

Legion Votes To Discontinue D. C. Paper

Delegates to a special convention of the District Department of the American Legion last night voted to discontinue publication of the department's monthly newspaper and shelve a resolution calling for a board of managers to assist District veterans.

Both proposals would have brought an increase in dues of all posts and members.

The delegates met at the Commerce Department Auditorium to consider matters bypassed at the regular convention last summer. The convention will reconvene in the Commerce auditorium at 10 a. m. today to adopt resolutions calling for a board of managers for the American Legion clubhouse and a "complete revision" of the department's constitution and bylaws.

A resolution calling for a $1 increase in yearly dues to sustain the newspaper, the Washington Legion News, reportedly operating at a yearly deficit of $8000, was voted down by the delegates. A following resolution ordered the paper discontinued.

The resolution asking for the appointment of a $7000-per-year claims specialist, financed by a 50-cent increase in yearly dues, to be placed in the Washington Regional Veterans office to give assistance in rehabilitating District veterans was turned down and a substitute proposal that this assistance be provided by the Veterans Service Center through an extra $5000 appropriation from the District government was shelved until today's sessions.

A resolution offered by Chief United States Delegate John Foster Dulles called for adjournment no later than December 12.

Herbert V. Ewart, Australian president of the Assembly, criticized all the big powers for failing to settle the problem of Italian colonies and playing power politics with it.

Truman Sees Army Welfare Adviser Group

President Truman conferred yesterday with members of the new Committee on Religious and Moral Welfare and Character Guidance in the Armed Forces.

Frank L. Weil, New York attorney, who is chairman of the committee, told reporters at the White House that the general idea behind the work of the group is "to bring men out of the services better than when they went in."

He said that Mr. Truman, in greeting the members, read a paraphrase of his statement of October 27 creating the committee. The Executive order of that date said it was the "policy of the Government to encourage and promote religious, moral and recreational welfare and character guidance of persons in the Armed Forces and thereby to enhance the military preparedness and security of the Nation."

After the welcome from President Truman, the committee members gathered in the Cabinet room and conferred with Secretary of Defense Forrestal, Secretary of the Army Royal, Secretary of the Navy Sullivan and C. V. Whitney, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force.

Well, chairman of the committee, is president of the National Jewish Welfare Board, and is a member of the national executive board of the Boy Scouts of America.

Other members of the committee are: Basil O'Connor, president and chairman of the board of governors, American National Red Cross.

U. N. Extends Life of Little Assembly Year

Paris, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The United Nations today extended for one year the life of its Russian-bloc "Little Assembly" despite the angry opposition of the Soviet bloc. The vote was 46 to 6, with India abstaining.

Only the six Soviet bloc delegations voted against a United States resolution calling for the extension of the "Little Assembly."

The Little Assembly meets in the intervals between the annual meetings of the General Assembly. It has no veto role.

A decision on the adjournment date, and the question of whether to call a special assembly at Lake Success, N. Y., early next year, was put off.

A resolution offered by Chief United States Delegate John Foster Dulles called for adjournment no later than December 12.

Pan American Defense Pact Takes Effect

A defense pact designed to muster the combined strength of the American republics against any aggressor went into force yesterday.

Secretary of State Marshall said the action "will be noted with interest far beyond the American continent."

The agreement for collective action in case of attack was drafted last year at Rio de Janeiro.

It became effective yesterday when Costa Rica gave the pact its necessary two thirds deposit of ratifications. She was fourteenth out of 21 nations to act.

Costa Rica's Ambassador, Mario Elquiav, signed the documents in a ceremony at the Pan American Union here. Present were Undersecretary of State Lovett, Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Connally (D., Tex.), top men on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Latin American diplomats.

Lovett read Marshall's message to the group. Marshall is in a hospital for a check-up.

The Inter-American Treaty, based on the United Nations Charter, provides:

1. Immediate military assistance by all of the American States to any member attacked by another nation in this hemisphere. First action would be a "cease-fire" order.
2. If a member is attacked by an outside power, all the treaty signatories will hold immediate consultations to decide what steps are needed to safeguard the hemisphere.

The new world security zone extends from the North to the South Pole, and includes Greenland.

Twenty-one new world nations are involved. The way was left open for Canada to join the pact, but so far it has shown no inclination to do so. However, Canada figures in the Atlantic union plans.

Twenty nations out of the 21 involved in the Rio treaty have signed. Ecuador, the twenty-first, indicated yesterday she would sign shortly.

Of those which have signed, 15 have gone further and officially ratified the treaty. Fourteen of the 15 have deposited their ratifications with the Pan American Union. That is what Costa Rica did yesterday.

President Truman has issued what amounts to a "silence order" on Government officials talking about next year's budget.

Apparently irked at recent disclosures of the effect of a 15-billion-dollar ceiling on 1950 military expenditures, he wrote all Government agencies asking them to "prevent any premature announcements" on the budget he now has in preparation.

Administration officials also were asked to "exercise extreme caution" in any public statements they might make about budgetary matters.

"Gag" Nature Denied

Several recent news stories have reported how the limit would result in sharp cutbacks in the expansion programs authorized by Congress last year.

While White House officials declared the letter was not a "gag," its receipt was followed by orders from the heads of the armed forces warning against further disclosures.

Army Secretary Royall and Navy Secretary Sullivan publicly directed their personnel to stop talking to newspapermen about the budget. Both repudiated suggestions that officials were taking their case for more money to the public by declaring that it was established policy to support the President's budget.

In the absence of Secretary Symington, the Air Force deferred any similar action but announced it was circulating Mr. Truman's letter to all USAF personnel.

"Mo" Report Denied

At the same time, the Navy declared it has "no plan of intention at the present time" to lay up the battleship Missouri.

A statement from Sullivan and Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, to this effect was issued, following publication of a story in yesterday's Washington Post that decommissioning of the Navy's last remaining battleship was contemplated under the 1950 budget.

A high-ranking source, however, declared that next year's Navy budget—now at the White House—will require laying up a number of ships, including the Missouri, if the 15 billion dollar ceiling or anything like it is held to.

It was pointed out that the new budget does not become effective until summer and that no actual decommission plans need be drafted until later, even though a cut in funds will require retrenchment.

Truman Aboard Today

President Truman will be aboard the Missouri this morning at Norfolk to take part in ceremonies attending the presentation of a silver service set to the ship by his home State of Missouri. Any news of the contemplated decommissioning of the vessel would put a damper on the occasion.

In this connection, it was recalled that more than a year ago there were widely current reports in Navy circles that the Navy Department had recommended laying up the Missouri to provide additional funds for antisubmarine vessels and plans, but the White House ordered the Missouri retained in service.

It was then pointed out that big battleships had "friends in court." Capt. Robert L. Dennison, Mr. Truman's naval aide, formerly was skipper of the Missouri, and his chief of staff, Fleet Adm. William D. Leahy, held his active commands during the heyday of heavy surface ships.

Some officials viewed the President's warning on budget disclosures as notice that he will not tolerate any lobbying for greater military appropriations such as occurred during the Eightieth Congress.

There have been widespread suggestions that some of the recent budget disclosures had this in view. Secretary Royall observed in his directive that the Army's recent draft cutback had been so interpreted but he declared the Army was not conducting such a "campaign."

"Why," he asked, "should professional military cliques arrogate unto themselves the right to nullify the will of the people as expressed at the polls?"

Economy reasons also played an important part, Figueres said because "the many hundreds of thousands of dollars we save from having no army will be used for public schools and education."

He stressed, too, that most of the dissolved army were citizen-soldiers who have returned to their usual tasks after the five-week civil war last March and April. Costa Rica had an army of about 5000 men.

He said the governing junta enjoyed general and enthusiastic public support which made the army unnecessary for internal purposes and felt there was little danger Costa Rica would be attacked from outside.

The junta will turn over the government on May 8, 1952 to president-elect Otilio Ulate, who will be the first constitutional president of the second republic.

Mme. Chiang Visits Marshall

HOSPITAL VISITORS—Mme. Chiang Kai-shek (right), wife of the Premier of China, leaves Walter Reed Hospital on the arm of Mrs. George C. Marshall, her hostess, after a conference with Secretary of State Marshall. Mme. Chiang is in this country seeking additional aid for China. It was her second visit with the Secretary at the Army Medical Center, where he is receiving a physical checkup

Mme. Chiang 'Encouraged' By Marshall

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek told reporters she felt "encouraged" after a four-hour visit with Secretary Marshall at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday.

"I would like to know anybody who has seen General Marshall and does not come away encouraged," she said as she left the hospital.

But from at least three other directions came hints that Administration and congressional leaders were not warming up to the urgent appeals of China's Nationalist government for additional military help.

First, Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), incoming chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Mme. Chiang had not asked to appear before his group, and added, "I don't imagine she will be asked." After a White House visit Connally said he and President Truman had discussed the foreign situation, including that in China.

No 'Watchdog' Invitation

Second, the so-called watchdog committee of Congress decided unanimously yesterday not to invite Mme. Chiang to state her case. According to Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), acting chairman, the committee felt it had no jurisdiction over such a question of policy as further aid to China.

"We felt it would be going out of our way and entirely inappropriate for this committee to invite her to come," Smith told reporters. "If, through the proper channels, she would request a hearing we probably would consider it favorably—but I see little prospect of such a request being made."

Finally, Senator Smith disclosed that watchdog committee members had not been consulted in any way about the present mission of former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, the most outspoken advocate of large-scale military help to China. Bullitt left for China November 9 at the request of the committee chairman, Senator H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), with the status of a special consultant.

Senator Smith said he knew nothing about reports that Bullitt had inspired Mme. Chiang's mission to this country. In any case, he said, the watchdog committee was concerned with economic cooperation and the military part of the present China aid program was entirely out of its jurisdiction.

"Bullitt went on the ECA (Economic Cooperation Administration) end of the job, and not on military aid," Smith said.

Favors Aid to Starving

Senator Smith did intimate, however, that he favored further American help to feed starving Chinese, even if they happened to be in Communist-controlled territory. A reporter asked him whether, if the Communists captured Shanghai, the people there would be fed with American supplies.

Smith replied that the United States had helped to feed millions of children in Communist-controlled eastern Europe, through the United Nations Children's Fund.

men tightly encircled by an equal number of Communists 30 miles farther southwest.

Sixty miles southeast, the government Sixth and Eighth Army Groups of 80,000 men are holding a salient north of the Hwai River line.

Reds Split Forces

Seven Communist columns under Gen. Chen Yi have been attacking the Hwai River salient.

Now, dispatches say, they have broken off the assault. Leaving only a small holding force behind, Chen Yi is reported sending six of his columns north as rapidly as possible to stop the government march south from Suchow.

His seventh column is reported marching northwest to join Gen. Liu Po-cheng's seven columns in strengthening the noose around the trapped government Twelfth Army group.

To rescue the Twelfth Army group, the former Suchow garrison faced the prospect of a 30-mile fighting advance, plus another 30 miles to reach the Hwai River salient.

When and where the issue would be joined remained in doubt.

Government quarters also disclosed that Nanking's immediate defenses were being strengthened by ordering in some 35,000 troops from the Hankow area, 300 air miles southwest of this capital. These reinforcements were described as now en route.

U. S. Joins Attack on Soviet For Holding Foreigners' Wives

Paris, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The United States joined Britain and Chile today in attacking Russia for using the Iron Curtain to keep Soviet wives separated from their foreign husbands.

In the United Nations Legal Committee, United States Representative Ernest A. Gross said Russia shows "the most flagrant disregard of fundamental human rights of the family and marriage."

He said 826 persons claiming American citizenship had been refused exit visas by Moscow as of January 1, 1948. Out of 3481 prospective Russian emigrants to the United States since 1940, only 27 were granted leave permits, Gross stated.

The American was speaking in citizens who have applied for permits to depart from Russia."

concern Russia for the policy. Britain's G. G. Fitzmaurice said the Soviet Union has "indulged in a campaign of petty humiliation and discouragement" of the wives. They are under constant threat of arrest, he said.

Alexei Pavlov of Russia asked postponement of the committee meeting. He is scheduled to answer the charges at the next meeting of the legal committee Monday night.

Gross said that since American recognition of the Soviet Union in 1933 no more than 50 Soviet wives of American citizens have been permitted to leave Russia.

"There now remain 350 Soviet wives and 65 Soviet husbands of American citizens who have applied for permits to depart from Russia."

3 U. S. Tuna Ships Report Attack by Unidentified Planes

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 3 (U.P.)—Three American tuna clippers were fired on by an "unidentified plane" off the coast of Nicaragua yesterday morning, Harold Cary, executive manager of the American Tunaboat Association, reported today.

Cary said the skipper of one of the three fishing boats telegraphed him:

"Tuna clippers Liberator, City of San Diego and Sun Ray fired on by unidentified plane 12:15 Greenwich time, December 2, 10 miles offshore, 70 miles southeast of Corinto. No damage suffered." Cary said he immediately informed the State Department in Washington, D. C.

(In Los Angeles, the Times published what it said was an unverified report that the fishing boats were fired upon by planes identified as Nicaraguan. The story said the planes flew away after the boats broke out American flags.)

In Washington, the State Department said it asked the American Embassy in Nicaragua to investigate.

Victory Gave Lie To Democracy Foes

on the north by the easily in-dated Netherlands, had been for 20 centuries the most formidable barrier to military operations against the German lands. All those natural obstacles were overcome.

Beyond that in western Europe the Allied armies twice battered their way through fortifications that had been designed with the greatest tactical and engineering skill. To break through either the Westwall or the Siegfried Line was outstanding in military annals; to smash them both in the space of 10 months was a matchless achievement for the participating troops.

It is easy to deprecate the value of fixed defenses and fortifications.
The Chinese Wall, the Roman Wall and the Maginot Line all failed, eventually, in their defensive purpose. However, on any given section of front, any unit that is on the defensive and has the advantages of carefully prepared defenses enjoys a tremendous superiority over its exposed opponents.

History's Mightiest Force Assembled

The Allied force that stood on the Elbe on May 6, 1945, was the most powerful military machine ever assembled. Its left flank rested on the Baltic Sea and its right in the Alps. Behind it were armadies of planes whose numbers were greater than all the air forces of the world a few years before.
Its line of supply and communications was a vast network that covered France and the United Kingdom and extended into every community of the homeland.

Its strength was supported by still another victorious host. To the south, pouring through the Alpine passes that had been the traditional avenues of classic warfare, were the million veterans of the Italian campaign under Alexander, backed also by immense air power and sea power and transoceanic supply lines. When these two forces came to a halt with the German surrender, their combined might was overwhelming evidence of democracy's might—a visible lesson of war.

Victory in the Mediterranean and European campaigns gave the lie to all who preached, or in our time shall preach, that the democracies are decadent, afraid to fight, unable to match the productivity of regimented economies, unwilling to sacrifice in a common cause.

Campaigns Proved Coalition Effective

The first and most enduring lesson of the Mediterranean and European campaigns was that the war can be waged effectively by a coalition of nations. Historic difficulties had been overcome and the grave doubts that had existed on this point even as late as the fall of 1942 had been completely dispelled. Governments and their subsidiary economic, political and military organizations had combined into one great effort in which no major difficulty could be traced to diverging national interests.

Allied effectiveness in World War II established for all time the feasibility of developing and employing joint control machinery that can meet the sternest tests of war. The key to the matter is a readiness, on highest levels, to adjust all nationalistic differences that affect the strategic employment of combined resources, and in the war theater, to designate a single commander who is supported to the limit.

In World War II, America and Great Britain, whose forces fought side by side in so many battles of the ground, sea, and air, understood and applied these truths. In the later stages of the war French forces likewise participated in this joint effort, as did detachments of numerous countries whose homelands had been previously overrun by the enemy.

Russia Not So Close

In Team of Nations

Co-operation with the Soviet forces was, unhappily, not so close.
But her forces were widely separated, geographically, from those of the Western Allies, and the flaw in over-all teamwork did not impair the march to victory. Even so, if that country could have been as closely knit into the team as were the others, victory would probably have been achieved earlier and the peace would have rested on a more secure foundation.

Foremost among the military lessons was the extraordinary and growing influence of the airplane in the waging of war. The European campaign almost daily developed new and valuable uses for air power. Its effect in the waging of German capacity was decisively felt on both fronts, the Allied and the Russian.

Beyond this, the airplane was a valuable logistics agent, particularly during our speedy dashes across France in the fall of 1944 and across Germany in the spring of 1945; without it those pursuits could never have proceeded with such speed nor could they have accomplished such remarkable results.

The combination of an overwhelming air force and the great mobility provided by the vehicular equipment of the Army enabled us to strike at any chosen point along a front of hundreds of miles. Our flexibility was nowhere better illustrated than during the German counteroffensive in the Ardennes when Patton's army ceased its preparations for an eastward attack, changed front, and undertook a movement extending over 60 to 70 miles at right angles to its former direction of advance.
In less than 72 hours from the time Patton's staff had its orders an entire corps of his army had initiated a new attack.

In dozens of ways scientists and inventors transformed the face of war. In landing on beaches we had the great advantage of new types of naval equipment and even tanks that could swim ashore after being launched into the water many hundreds of yards from the beach. Before the end of the war we were employing in great numbers recoilless weapons of very light weight that delivered projectiles of tremendous force.

Worked to Improve Arms—And the Man

While we studied the effect on the conduct of war of new vehicles, new weapons, new systems of transport and communications, at the same time we reexamined the role of the fundamental agent in military success—the individual soldier.

The trained American soldier possesses qualities that are almost unique. Because of his initiative and resourcefulness, his adaptability to change and his readiness to resort to expedient, he becomes, when he has attained a proficiency in all the normal techniques of battle, a most formidable soldier. Yet even he has his limits; the preservation of his individual and collective strength is one of the greatest responsibilities of leadership.

The effect of prolonged combat is always bad. If a unit is brought out of line before the processes of physical and mental fatigue have gone too far and before its losses have become excessive it can, with the assimilation of new recruits, be ready for reentry into battle far sooner than one that has been kept in line too long.
Moreover, the periodic rests for the front-line soldier have a splendid effect upon morale—and in any kind of warfare troop morale is always a decisive factor.

Spirit, Emotions Are Important, Too

Early in the North African campaign it became evident that the emotional stamina and spiritual strength of the individual soldier were as important in battle success as his weapons and training.
Combat neuroses among the troops developed on an alarming scale as the intensity of our offensives increased.

At the war's beginning the average American officer, both regular and civilian, placed too much faith in a surface discipline based solely upon perfection in the mechanics of training. Commanders are habitually diffident where they are called upon to deal with subjects that touch the human soul—aspirations, ideals, inner beliefs, affections, hatreds.

A profound understanding of philosophy is not necessarily a part of the equipment of a successful military leader. Yet as certainly as a national army neglects the need for a simple, commonly held understanding of the Nation's welfare and the individual's relationship to the whole, so certainly will victory be attained only at added cost and so much will victory itself be jeopardized.

In the summer of 1945, General Eisenhower went to Moscow as the guest of Generalissimo Stalin and with Marshal Zhukov as his guide. He was the first foreigner non-Communist—ever to review a parade through Red Square by Stalin's side standing on the top of Lenin's tomb. He was dining in the Kremlin, shown the Red Army's most secret map room, told frankly that there was nothing in Russia he could not see if he wanted to.

His own story of this remarkable trip, and of his private conversations with Stalin, will be told here tomorrow in the next instalment of his "Crusade in Europe."

This is a condensed serialization of "Crusade in Europe," by Dwight D.
Eisenhower. It contains highlights of the book published by Doubleday and Co., Inc.

Howdy, Big Boy...

NEIGHBORS MEET—Ronnie Sharum, 4, of Los Angeles, was told that the best way to get acquainted with a turtle was to offer the turtle a carrot—but to be sure not to scare him. Ronnie tried that approach with Big Boy, owned by a neighbor, Dr. I. D. Nokes. Who got scared?

Nazi Officer Is Hanged for Flier Massacre

Munich, Germany, Dec. 3 (P).— A German navy lieutenant who led the Borkum Island massacre of seven unarmed American airmen was hanged today in the courtyard of Landsberg Prison. Three other German war criminals were executed with him.

The executions raised to 91 the number of Germans hanged at Landsberg since October 15. They were convicted by United States war crimes courts. Officials said 48 men still are scheduled for hanging, but their cases are being reviewed.

The naval officer, Erich Wentzel, 46, was stationed on Borkum when an American bomber made a forced landing in August, 1944.
Hanged with Wentzel were:
Georg Eickstein, 46, Nazi medical lieutenant, accused of shooting an unarmed American flier to death in March, 1945.

Hans Eichel, 58, police director at Offenbach, accused of ordering the death of an American flier in February, 1945.
Josef Remmle, 45, sergeant at Dachau concentration camp. An Army statement said he selected inmates for extermination transports and "was in charge of executions."

King Abdullah Expected to Rule 2 Nations

Beirut, Lebanon, Dec. 3 (P).—
Reports from Amman today said King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan is expected to proclaim himself monarch of Palestine and Trans-Jordan in a few days.

Meanwhile, Aleppo, the principal city, and Damascus, the capital of Syria, were under army law as a result of disorders costing 10 lives and more than 120 injured which grew out of popular disas-satisfaction with the Palestine situation.

The uprising in Syria may be a signal for similar opposition demonstrations in other Arab countries, particularly Egypt and Iraq.
Dispatches from Damascus said the Syrian army had assumed the responsibility of keeping order and had imposed a 6 p. m. to 6 a.
m. curfew until further notice.

Meanwhile no solution of the government crisis appeared following the resignation of the Premier Jamil Mardam Bey and his cabinet yesterday.

intended to give the Arabs part of the Holy Land to Trans-Jordan.
In the Security Council, the American delegation apparently lost its fight for immediate admission of Israel to United Nations membership. The Council's membership committee decided without a vote to put off action on Israel's application until after the political committee completes its Palestine debate.

Adjournment of the Assembly may be little more than a week away.
By a vote of 19 to 17 the committee approved making Haifa a free port and Lydda a free airport, only part of the Bernadotte recommendation to be passed so far. The Jews now hold both places.

Chambers Microfilms Indicate Reds Stole Top-Secret Papers

sible and fly back. Nixon, all reporters in Washington know, has been more responsible than any other member of the committee for bringing Hiss-Chambers facts into the open. It was Nixon, infact, who ordered a subpoena served on Chambers—and who got a pumpkin and its contents.

Documents Ordered Sealed
3. The microfilm supplement documents turned over two weeks ago by Chambers in Baltimore at a pretrial examination in the libel suit brought against him by Hiss for his charge that Hiss was a Communist once. It was learned last night that at that examination Chambers, asked by Hiss' attorney if he had any documentary proof "stopping the show" by saying, "only these." By his words "only these" he meant more than sixty documents, which were in document and not in microfilm form. They were so important that Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut was called in. So was Alexander M. Campbell, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the criminal division of the Department of Justice. The upshot was that the documents were sealed in the interests of national security and given into Campbell's custody.

Hiss Says He Prompted Action
4. Nixon, presumably acting on the theory that if Chambers had some undisclosed documents he might have others, issued a subpoena calling for anything and everything pertinent that Chambers had.

5. Hiss, who was not present when Chambers was questioned but who read yesterday that the documents of the pretrial hearing were under study, issued a statement in New York last night saying:
"During the course of the examination by counsel of Chambers in the libel action which I have brought against him in Baltimore, Chambers produced certain documents which I considered of such importance that I directed my attorney to place them at once before the Department of Justice. This has been done and I have offered my full cooperation to the Department of Justice and to the grand jury in a further investigation of this matter."

6. Thomas J. Donegan, Special Assistant Attorney General, came from New York to Washington did a lot of hurried conferring about the case, and went back by train to New York, presumably to get ready to present the whole case to the Federal grand jury
there on Wednesday.

7. It was learned incontrovertibly that the Department of Justice had studied for two weeks the information given by Chambers in the pretrial examination in Baltimore. Nothing had been done or announced by the department.

There were many other points that could be numbered, but the outstanding fact was that Representative Nixon, because of his belief that Chambers might have other untold information, gave Stripling some strong instructions on Wednesday night.

Nixon was to leave—and did leave—on Thursday afternoon for Panama.
Nixon requested Stripling to get up early in the morning on Thursday and take a blanket subpoena to Chambers on his farm in Westminster, Md.

Stripling did.
The microfilm came out of the pumpkin.

SATURDAY NIGHT

Your night to dine out? It's an old custom of many families to add that bit of variety to the weekly schedule by dining out on Saturday evening. Of course when you take the family out you want a number of things... Individual service, atmosphere, easy parking and above all the best food prepared to your taste and at a price you can afford. Tonight would be an ideal night to treat yourself and your family to a dinner of tantalizingly prepared Saurbraten with buttered noodles, crisp salad and steaming rolls. Where else but at Stripling came back to Washington.

Stripling got Representative Mundt on the telephone and, after many microfilms had been developed, told him about them and about the more than 60 documents of the libel suit pretrial examination.

Mundt's statement stressed that the microfilms and documents would be kept under 24-hour guard.
(Mundt talked before he knew there were Navy Department as well as State Department documents in the microfilms.)

Stripling Shows Films

Stripling held a press conference last evening.
"Here is a case of film, unopened," he said. He showed a metal cylinder about an inch in diameter and 2½ inches long. He said there were many cylinders, but did not say how many.

"Reproduced," he said, "the ones we have developed so far make a stack of letter-sized documents 3 or 4 feet high."
He said that presumably the original documents were returned to the departmental files after being microfilmed.

How important they were was shown by the top few lines on one microfilm.
"Stripling steadfastly refused to allow publication of the contents of any of the documents." But the top lines on one read:
"This telegram must be closely paraphrased before being communicated to anyone."

Telegram From Bullitt
It was dated June 13, 1938, was received at the State Department at 3:15 p. m. that day, was addressed to the Assistant Secretary of State, and was from former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, in Paris.

The significance of the order to paraphrase it was this:
1. If it were released or made known as it was sent, it would give any good code-breaker a chance to reverse matters and see what the code used was.

2. If the code used was broken on the one message, it could be readily used to translate other messages.

3. It was, in effect, the equivalent of the wartime top-secret warning on highly confidential matters.

Another such message in the microfilms bore the same preface and the additional words in capital letters:
"Strictly confidential for the Secretary."

This was the peacetime equivalent of top-secret stuff.
Another bore in long-hand the notation: "Handed to the German Ambassador by Mr. Welles." It was dated 7/21/37. Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, was still with the department then.
Stripling's press conference produced a lot of questions:

"Why didn't Mr. Chambers bring all this out before?" (The questioner meant during the House committee investigation of the Hiss-Chambers story, the Federal grand jury's investigation, and the libel pretrial quizzing.)

Stripling said he had no comment.
"Would he be legally culpable for possessing such information?" Stripling would not comment, but said the House Committee would seek all the facts.
"How many tubes of microfilm were found?"
"Enough," said Stripling.
"Were the documents—or mi-

Slaughter Files Innocent Plea As Lobbyist

Former Representative Roger C.
Slaughter pleaded innocent yesterday in District Court to an indictment charging him with failing to register as a lobbyist here.

The Missouri Democrat who was "purged" by President Truman in 1946 was given until December 24 to file motions or supplemental pleadings. The arraignment was before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

Slaughter is charged with failing to comply with requirements of the Federal Lobbying Act during the past year although allegedly attempting to influence legislation for the Kansas City Board of Trade, the Chicago Board of Trade, the Minneapolis Grain Exchange and the North American Export Grain Association.

It was alleged that Slaughter was paid $54,000 for service and expenses.

Although earlier he had stated the indictment was "false, fraudulent and politically inspired," Slaughter refused to comment yesterday.

Loyalty Checks Force 385 to Quit U. S. Employment

A total of 385 persons have quit the Government service or withdrawn their applications for Federal jobs because of loyalty checks, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday.

The commission said 51 of the 385 were fired for disloyalty. No names were disclosed.
Three others who were applying for jobs were ruled ineligible, and the remaining 331 either quit or withdrew their employment applications after full investigations of their loyalty had been made.

Only 35 persons appealed their dismissals to the President's Loyalty Review Board, and the board has closed 11 of those hearings.

Of the 11 cases, the firings were upheld by the board, while two others were cleared and returned to their jobs. In two cases, the board merely rendered an "advisory" opinion, and in one it refused to entertain the discharged worker's appeal.

microfilms—actually turned over to Soviet Russia?

Stripling had no comment. One reporter spoke up to say he guessed it was possible to make more than one microfilm copy of a single document and to retain a copy while sending one elsewhere.
Stripling didn't disagree.

"Have you talked to the State Department about this?"
"No," Stripling said.
"To the Justice Department?"
"What if the Justice Department demands jurisdiction over the material you have subpenanead?"

"That will be a matter for the committee to decide," Stripling said.
"Is Alger Hiss' name mentioned in any of the documents reproduced from the film?"
"We have not analyzed all of them yet," he replied.

"Is the Justice Department seeking Mr. Chambers?"
"I don't know," Stripling said.
"I think the most important thing is—who made these things available to Mr. Chambers?"
"Is there any evidence, other than the testimony of Mr. Chambers, that he got anything from Mr.
Hiss?"

Stripling said he had no comment.
"Will anybody new be subpoenaed in the investigation?"
Stripling said emphatically:
"Yes, indeed."

"Who?"
He wouldn't comment.
"Has Mr. Hiss been resubpena-ed as yet?"
Stripling replied:
"Not as yet."

Theater News

Washington theatergoers are to have two chances to enjoy legitimate stage productions next year, if present plans materialize. Next March the Amherst College Players will give Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" in the Folger Library's Elizabethan Theater. This will inaugurate what is hoped will be continued theatrical use of the little auditorium by local and other nonprofessional drama groups. Sometime early next year New York productions may also be on tryout in Alexandria's Virginia Theater. Neither opportunity, unfortunately, fulfills all the requirements of a real theater in Washington—requirements that were lacking even before the National Theater turned itself into a movie palace rather than allow Negroes in its audiences.

In point of size, the Virginia Theater offers the better hope. In contrast to the Folger Library's 300-seat Elizabethan Theater, it holds 1133 persons. But in conformity with Virginia State law it will be open only to white patrons. The Folger Library Theater, besides being very small, has a stage suitable only for Shakespeare or other seventeenth or eighteenth century plays. Being under the control of the Amherst board of trustees; it will be open, as the library itself is, without regard to color.

On different grounds we are glad to see both these developments in and close to the theaterless National Capital. It is a fact, however, that neither one, nor both together, satisfies the needs of this community. Washington will still lack a theater of its own where all its citizens can worship Melpomene and Thalia from any seat their pocketbook affords. We trust that nothing less than a full provision of the need will turn aside efforts to achieve it.

How Much Defense?

In attempting to pass judgment on what is a reasonable defense budget, the Administration, and after it Congress, is faced with a devil's choice. No one wishes to take responsibility for cutting the proposals of the armed forces if in fact such cuts would endanger national security. But what is an adequate defense budget? There is no yardstick. President Truman has set a ceiling of 15 billion dollars for the fiscal year 1950. Some military leaders, on the other hand, have been talking about 25 billions.

A number of economists, including Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, have reaffirmed the President's figure of 15 billions as about the maximum the economy can safely stand without imposing heavy controls. This includes approximately $14,600,000,000 for the armed forces and 600 millions for stockpiling. It contrasts with a budget of $13,185,000,000 for fiscal 1948. Actual spending in fiscal 1949 is running at a rate of $12,500,000,000, whereas in fiscal 1948 it was $10,800,000,000. The difference between these sums and the over-all budgets is made up, in part at least, by contractual authorization for items that cannot be procured at the time they are ordered.

There is some suspicion that the recently announced cutback in the draft represents an attempt by the Army to influence public opinion to revise the 15-billion-dollar ceiling. This suspicion is whetted by remembrance of the stories of unidentified submarines that conveniently appeared in the Pacific at the time the Navy wanted more money, and by the alarming figures on Russian plane production with which certain Air Force leaders regaled Congress. Whether in fact a reduction in the projected size of the Army or the Air Force will be necessary is of course impossible for a layman to determine. Respecting the 70-group air force, which has become a catch slogan, it is important to remember that the attainment of such a force was contemplated for 1952, not 1950. In other words, statements about current strength have little bearing on the decision.

It is certainly true that the armed forces, like everyone else in the United States, have had to contend with rising costs. Fifteen billion dollars will not buy today what it would have bought a year ago. Moreover, there have been certain unanticipated expenses, such as the Berlin air lift, which is costing an estimated 100 million dollars a year exclusive of the war on equipment. So far Secretary Forrestal and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been working within the 15-billion-dollar limit set by the President. This sum compensates for a 5 per cent rise in costs over the summer of 1948. Some costs, of course, have risen more than this. The price of airplanes, for instance, has gone up approximately 15 per cent. Probably some adjustment of the 15-billion-dollar figure is justified to maintain the present rate of preparation. But surely any additional sum in this context can be held to a billion or a half billion dollars.

In the last analysis it is for the President to say what constitutes a reasonable defense budget. He is the person whose job it is to evaluate, with the aid of his top advisers, all the factors that bear upon security—the external threat of war, the non-military needs of the economy, and the judgment of military leaders. Naturally this is not a decision to be reached arbitrarily or lightly, but, once reached, it should be binding upon the services. How well it is respected by military leaders will be a real test of unification.

How many of us realize that we might be within a hairline of a shooting war with the Russians over Berlin? Very few, we suspect. We have come to take for granted a situation which has gone on for several months as if it were a static situation. But, even if the deadlock in the Security Council remains immovable, events in Berlin are not standing still. The municipal elections scheduled for tomorrow—which were authorized by the four powers in 1946—are going to be held in spite of Russian opposition. And the opposition is extremely bitter—expressed first by a Communist boycott and then by the setting up of a rump assembly of Communists for all Berlin. This the Russians have not recognized formally. The question arises whether the Russians and their German stooges will take action on Sunday to disrupt the polling and make sure that the people's choice remains unregistered.

This they might attempt to do in a variety of ways—from an incursion of German rowdies into the western sectors to an invasion of Russian troops. It is anybody's guess whether they will interfere, directly or indirectly. We don't believe the Russians want war, but we are not so sure whether they realize the Western determination to resist intimidation. The consensus in Paris is that Vishinsky himself is fully aware of the Western attitude. But has he—dare he—communicate his knowledge to his superiors in the Kremlin? That is what is doubtful. The Kremlin, as has been shown a score of times, is served by yes-men, or representatives who report only what they are expected to report. Even diplomats with less at stake than the Russians sometimes get into this compliant attitude. At most they may risk their jobs instead of their lives, but even that possibility may dissuade them from honest and independent reporting. It would not be surprising, therefore, if the Politburo were ignorant of the fact so indubitably patent to Vishinsky in Paris that the Western Allies mean business. In other words, the Russians may think they can overawe their quondam allies, and get away with it.

But there are other considerations than ignorance of the Allies' readiness to resist that may be animating the Russians. They may feel that, come what may, they cannot risk an anti-Communist verdict in the Berlin balloting. In 1946 they suffered a severe blow to their prestige when Berlin gave the Communists only a 19 per cent vote. Indications are that this time a free and fair ballot, even with the Communists, would have the 1946 figure, for the blockade has been sapping steadily at Communist support for Soviet Russia. One of the Communist calls, Pieck, is reported in the Socialist Call as saying, "This damned blockade has lost us more in three weeks than we were able to gain in three years." It may very well be, then, that Moscow feels that its interest and prestige in Soviet Europe depend upon preventing the vote on Sunday.

Soviet psychology, as Mr. Churchill has said, is impossible to fathom. Anything may happen on Sunday, even the worst, though this country is in a state of unawareness of the touch-and-go situation. This is not to say that even if there were general awareness, there would be any counsel of retreat. Just the contrary appears to be true, for the case of Soviet aggression in Germany is crystal clear, and American firmness appears to reflect popular opinion. At any rate, the light Wallace vote should have persuaded the Kremlin that the American people will not be bludgeoned into surrender of their legal rights. At the same time nothing clearer in the light of the history of the Berlin dispute than that a joint enterprise with the Russians in running Berlin is impossible. Yesterday even General Howey, General Clay's No. 2 in Berlin, admitted it. World government idealists are nowadays laughed at for their naivete, yet the theoretical purpose of our tilt with the Russians is to reestablish a world government in microcosm. If the peace survives the elections on Sunday, the Allies might take another "look to the end," as Cromwell would say. When the blockade has been lifted, surely there must be some thought given to a rearrangement of the Western position in accordance with the existence of two worlds. Berlin is a limb that the Allies occupied in deference to the One World hope—a limb which the Russians have shattered by a course of events which the recognition of the Communist Assembly is the culmination.

Equal Justice

The laxity and evident unwillingness of Georgia law enforcement officers to act in the cold-blooded murder of Robert Mallard, a Negro, is as horrible an example of unequal justice as we have had since the Walton County massacre in the same State. So far the only action taken in the Mallard case has been the temporary arrest of the victim's widow, who identified one or two of the white perpetrators of the crime. No community with such a record can, as Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution has pointed out, plead to be left alone to work out its own race problem "honestly and justly."

The situation in Georgia stands in sharp contrast to what has happened in a different but related case in Alabama. There a white man who raped a Negro woman was apprehended, prosecuted, found guilty and sentenced by an all-white jury to 45 years in jail. This example of justice applied without regard to—or perhaps one should say despite—the color factor is not wholly unprecedented in the South. But it is unusual enough to be worthy of notice all over the Nation. In fact it constitutes one of the most hopeful indications in recent years of a sense of responsibility on the race problem.

The contrast between the Georgia and the Alabama actions is, it seems to us, an adequate answer to those who oppose Federal civil rights legislation as an invasion of State rights. The South has nothing to fear from civil rights legislation if it follows the Alabama example and keeps its own record clean. It has, and should have, everything to fear if it defaults on the job of seeing equal justice done after the Georgia example.

Price Support

Among the controversial issues that the incoming Congress will be called upon to settle, none is of more importance from the viewpoint of national welfare than the fate of the Aiken long-range farm price support program. That program, providing for a flexible system of price supports instead of the present rigid 90 per cent of parity formulas, has received support from unexpected quarters, notably from the National Grange, which favors the Aiken plan "in principle." A number of State organizations affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation have also gone on record in favor of the Aiken law.

On the other hand, members of the congressional farm bloc from cotton-growing Southern States are expected to put up a strong fight for indefinite retention of the 90 per cent price support system for basic crops such as cotton. Moreover, it is reported that this group will have the CIO as an ally in the battle for high support prices for farm products—a most surprising development in view of organized labor's complaints of high food prices. However, the CIO's economic advisers are said to favor a change in the system. They would abandon the present system of supporting prices through Government purchases and loans, and, instead, pay direct subsidies to farmers to offset any decline in market prices below former support levels. A program of this sort would acquit the CIO of charges of inconsistency and would have the further dubious advantage of bringing to public attention the year-to-year costs of a rigid price support system such as we now have. However, the inherent dangers of any system that insures maintenance of returns to farmers at high and inflexible levels not adjusted to changing conditions of supply and demand would remain.

Senator Aiken is not exaggerating when he warns that "with rigid 90 per cent price supports farm commodity prices would collapse and pull the whole national economy down with them." The danger of such a collapse would be quite as great under any system providing for payment of subsidies to farmers to yield equally high returns. In the absence of rigid systems of production controls, the existing system or the subsidy plan could inevitably lead to overproduction of farm products, and prevent the adjustments needed to maintain a sound, balanced system of agriculture.

As a matter of fact, this country is already confronted by a serious surplus problem as a result of its commitment to maintain prices of superabundant crops at artificially high levels. By mid-November, for instance, the Commodity Credit Corporation had acquired more than 2.6 million bales of the current cotton crop under loan agreements and the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau estimates that total movements into the loan this season may amount to from 4.4 to 5.7 million bales. By the end of October, moreover, 217 million bushels of wheat were being held under loan or purchase agreements, and it is expected that a large percentage of the corn crop will also be held off the market under loan agreements. And this is happening at a time when employment and the national income are at record levels.

The mere fact that this country is piling up so-called agricultural surpluses under such extraordinarily favorable conditions is sufficient evidence of the dangerous potentialities of the present support system. The realization that farm prosperity cannot be permanently sustained on any such precarious foundation explains why support for a more realistic program is coming from far-flung farm groups as well as from the Department of Agriculture, which has a deserved reputation as a friend of the farmer.

Feverish where perfumes lie

Brown and black are barnessed,

Brawny forkfuls rise from piled

Fragrant load is trundled, slows

Mounded high. The stack grows, the sides fill,
Shaggy sweet—a rolling ship,

Over stubbled rise and dip,

Soar the bladed pinions far

Over sward and billy bar

Letters To The Editor

Civil Rights Timetable

We cannot follow the line of reasoning in your November 30 editorial, "Timetable for Civil Rights."

Under normal conditions the strategy of attempting to have Congress pass the least "objectionable" piece of legislation first and moving on to the more difficult may seem wise indeed. But we are not dealing here with normal conditions. The opposition to the civil rights program has repeatedly declared itself against the foot-in-the-door procedure and will fight just as hard against the "least objectionable" as it will against the "most objectionable" part of the program.

We are most emphatically opposed to your idea that the fair employment practices bill should take last place on a civil rights timetable. First, this is the basic and fundamental part of the program and will do more than any other measure to correct the system of discrimination and injustice that so many of us have been forced to live under for so many years.

Second, a period of full employment such as now is the most propitious time to enact FEPC legislation, since the propaganda of the opposition that job displacement will result will do the least harm, and in any future time of economic distress the customary disproportionate effect on minorities will be held to a minimum.

We must urge that the poll tax be outlawed by statute and not by constitutional amendment as you suggest. A careful study of the debates in the Congress in recent years will show that the constitutional argument seems to be in favor of the power of Congress to pass such a statute. The opponents have raised the constitutional question with more heat than light. We are willing to take our chance with the Supreme Court of the United States.

Religion In The Schools

In your issue of December 1, the Very Rev. Francis J. Connell, C.S.S.R., S. T. D., in reply to my letter of November 26, requested me to reconcile my statements with the quotations from the writings of Horace Mann.

I never said that Horace Mann and his associates, who sponsored the establishment of the public school system, were hostile to religion. In fact, Horace Mann, who was accused by the clergy of being hostile to religion, was one of the most conscientious and sincerely religious men in his day. He was a great church worker. All I said was that at the time Horace Mann sponsored the public school system "a definite understanding prevailed under the general tax plan that no citizen should be taxed to support the teaching of religion."

I draw this information from the laws which were incorporated in the State constitutions, which in substance read as follows: "Provision shall be made by law for the establishment of a uniform system of public schools, which shall be open to and sufficient for the education of all children in the State, and shall be under the absolute control of the State, and free from sectarian church control, and no other and different schools shall ever receive any aid or support from public funds. No sectarian tenet, creed or church doctrine shall be taught in the public schools."

Such laws have been upheld by the Supreme Court time and again as constitutional. Mr. Thomas A. Nolan in your issue of same date attacks my position and wants to know whether I consider "religion is of concern to the public welfare or not." I certainly do. But that is no reason why religion should be taught in the public schools by law at public expense. The payment of tithes and foreign mission offerings to promulgate the Gospel vitally affects the public welfare for good, but that is no justification to have the State promulgate the Gospel and compel all its citizens to pay tithes and foreign mission offerings.

Yellow Lights

Three-colored traffic lights must be more expensive and complicated to manufacture, install, operate, and maintain than two-colored traffic lights. The yellow light has become meaningless and hazardous.

To the average motorist, judging by his behavior in traffic, the yellow light means: "Speed up; keep going, as fast as you can, as long as you have the yellow light, even if it means making the final dash through the intersection against the red light."

That the yellow light is superfluous is perfectly clear to anybody who rides in a taxicab on 5th ave. in New York. Anybody who does so is bound to feel that there was never any good reason for the yellow light, and that it is certain to be eliminated generally at some future date.

Dewey And The Farm Program

Had Mr. Dewey taken an intelligent stand on the farm parity program and enlightened our citizens somewhat as follows he would have gained many millions of votes in the lower income groups of America now bedeviled by the principal essential item of the high cost of living—food.

We have a very serious farm problem which will not be solved by the present type of program even though we spend, as we inevitably will, many billions of dollars in such support. American farm income the past year was about $2 billion. There are slightly over nine million farmers and farm workers in this country. The average income of the farmer is approximately $3500, not seemingly a large income for his labor and uninfated capital investment estimated in the 1940 census at 40 billion.

The fly in the ointment is, as proudly disclosed by the largest agricultural journal in the United States, that 50 per cent of American farmers receive 90 per cent of all farm income. Other reliable sources estimate that the upper 33 per cent income bracket is receiving 80 per cent of the farm income. Even in the boom year 1944 the highest income farmer in the lower half received only $1500 and he received only $40 from the many Government benefits.

Simple calculations on the above statistics reveal that the upper third of our farmers received an average of $8550; the upper half an average $6730 and the lower half an average $710. Under the present type of farm support program to give the $710 farmer $1 we are paying the wealthy farmer $9 out of the public till.

This is gross enrichment of the wealthy farmer and impoverishment of the American consumer and taxpayer including the lower income bracket farmer whose direct, increased costs of living by reason of the present farm parity are far larger than the direct benefits he receives.

Corcoran Exhibit

Much has been said on the Corcoran art show—the limited selection of only 20 pictures out of 900 entries. This seemed very harsh judging to the participants. However, after careful analysis of all the pictures there it must be conceded that there were very few pictures that could have been added to the chosen 20.

The real purpose of a show is to encourage talent, and more than that to establish high artistic criteria. Art exhibits must have critical standards, and a flexibility that improves these standards.

Art shows sometimes develop into clichés of pseudo-modernism. The artist paints pictures for shows, imitative of our modern masters, afraid of his own true expression or creative impulse because he feels that he won't be able to make the show. Then there is the other, the conservative show that repudiates all new expression and has a consistency of mediocrity discouraging the youthful energetic impulse.

This judging was a shaking up—a surprise, but perhaps it was a good thing. Talent will not be discouraged if the artist has a true purpose. The exhibit wasn't created as a soothing salve for coming-up painters, but rather as a civic endeavor to establish an art form that can hold its own as an American expression which will compete with the best European exhibits.

This show was a challenge for all the talented to bring up their levels of artistic endeavor.

Dewey And The Farm Program

At a small part of the many billions of dollars the present program has or will cost in the next few years governmental aid could be concentrated on bettering the lot of the $710-a-year farmer and farmer wherein lies our problem. This could be done by means of greatly expanded oil conservation, electrification and fertilization programs, rehabilitating the millions of poor, eroded, run-down farms; educational programs; technical assistance; formation of cooperative pools of modern, efficient farm machinery for use of the small farmer; reeducation and transplantation of the surplus, hopelessly submarginal and technologically displaced farmers; retirement of submarginal land from cultivation.

The world has need for all the food that the United States can possibly produce. In lieu of our present role of international Santa Claus, we should concentrate on the development of methods of exchange of desirable products of the labor, raw materials, etc. of over-populated countries for the surplus of our full-blast agricultural program.

In such a multilateral exchange of products and labor between land-rich and labor-rich countries lies the only road to peace in this world. The artificial scarcity, to maintain prices, philosophy underlying our prewar and postwar economy as exemplified by the farm program is a crime against our whole modern civilization and mankind.

Had Mr. Dewey, instead of his feeble "me too" on the farm program, informed the American people as to how they are being duped by it and put forth some such constructive program as outlined above he would have become the hero of millions of American consumers and taxpayers, including a large part of the farmers, far outweighing the few votes of upper income bracket farmer that such an exposure of the truth would lose.

Hearthside Diplomacy

Entertaining Foreigners

THE UNLOVED role of rich relation becomes increasingly difficult for this country as the Atlantic defense alliance develops. For the United States must work in closer relationship with countries whose background and culture are different and whose pride is on the defensive at receiving help. Added to this are the misconceptions and slanders about this country spread in western Europe both by friend and enemy.

How fear of a "barbaric" Americanization of western Europe by "canned food, canned music, canned thought" is promoted by left-wing intellectuals is told by Andre Visson in his recent book, As Others See Us. He points out that few Europeans have seen American life first hand, and that in their hurt pride at being pensioners of a superpower they tend to accept—even with eagerness—reports of crudities and weaknesses here.

Added to this are the distortions spread by Hollywood, by glamour advertising in magazines, by the playing up of crime, sex and trivialities in news stories, and by the behavior of some members of both the armed and civilian forces of occupation.

WESTERN nations, as they now seek closer union in defense of their civilization, even their existence, are sniffing at each other in much the same way as the different American States did in the early days of this Republic. In this set-up the United States is naturally the most sniffed at. It is to many Europeans what the caricatured New Yorker is to out-State Americans.

Certainly a Western defense alliance can function without its peoples loving one another. Yet it will always be weak at the core if this country in its touchy role of head man comes to be regarded more and more with misunderstanding, jealousy, dislike and eventually fear.

The Voice of America can clear up many misconceptions, and especially rebut the Communist smear campaign. American tourists can help. So can letters and parcels from here. But a more direct and personal means of cementing in spirit the proposed Atlantic pact is entertaining in American homes foreign students, teachers, specialists, office personnel. What these visitors especially want, according to educational and diplomatic authorities, is to meet representative American families.

Recently a group of foreign teachers, brought to this country last summer for a study tour by several national organizations, sent in reports on this American trip. In reply to the question as to whether social activities had been adequate, many of the visitors said they were disappointed at not meeting more typical American families. One added that she hoped foreign young people coming to this country would have this opportunity because she said experiences in youth were always so vividly remembered, and "as we get older are surrounded by a rosy glow."

THERE ARE now in the United States 126 exchange teachers, 112 British, 7 French and 7 Canadian. These are generally well taken care of socially by school patrons. And the State Department sees to it that visiting specialists and officials meet congenial Americans and are given a varied social life.

But the weak spot in American hospitality is that since the 21,000 foreign students here and also the office personnel of international organizations and foreign missions. The mistake Americans frequently make is to entertain foreign students or other visitors in groups. The students especially prefer to go in ones or at most twos into American homes and thus get better acquainted with their hosts.

At present one group is doing most of the entertaining of foreign students. It consists of faculty members and persons active in international movements. This is helpful but it reaches only a small percentage of students, and it limits their social experience. Foreign students are often intellectually mature and very eager to see what they call "typical American life" at close range.

The Institute of International Education has been promoting hospitality for visiting students, but it reports that far too little is being done to advertise our civilization at the hearthside. Help from community organizations is needed to make Americans aware of their great opportunity for diplomacy—especially at the holiday season.

For, as Mr. Visson says in his book: "Every American who helps at least one European to understand America, her objectives and her methods of achieving them, has made a personal and extremely valuable contribution to the most vital cause of our time."

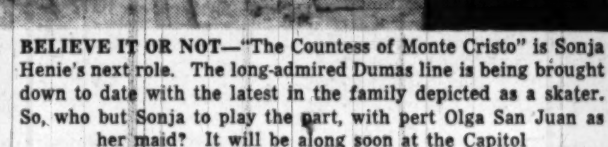

Outlawing Monopoly

Congress knows full well that the antitrust laws are weak tools, so weak in fact that, against the shrewd men in charge of monopolies, the Attorney General is outdone by them before he hauls them into court. In order to restore economic freedom in the United States we shall, it stands to reason, have to outlaw monopoly. Competition is no longer a potent weapon to use against mighty monopolies. As a matter of fact, it was competition that put monopoly in power and small businesses out of business. HARRY DANIELS.

Los Angeles Loyalty Quiz Is Described

The Los Angeles loyalty program is based on the philosophy that a man is not entitled to bite the hand that feeds him, members of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers were told yesterday.

The program, believed to be the first of its kind on the local government level, was described by Los Angeles County Counsel Harold W. Kennedy at an afternoon session of the institute's thirteenth annual conference in the Hotel Mayflower.

Since the Los Angeles County program went into effect in August, 1947, the Los Angeles city government and the Los Angeles city school district, separate legal entities, have ordered similar programs for their employees.

Kennedy said the program was based on the philosophy that "it is inconceivable that any employee shall represent the people, be supported by the people, and at the same time retain the right to overthrow the unit of government for which he works."

Opponents of the program argued that "employees had the right to advocate overthrow of the Government under the First Amendment of the Constitution and as a corollary had the right of silence," Kennedy said, but he added that there was legal precedent for believing that an individual had a constitutional right to engage in political activity, but no constitutional right to a Government job.

As for results of the program, Kennedy said "I am proud to say we were 99.44 per cent pure." Out of 22,000 employees, only 23 refused to participate and only 73 refused to answer a question of whether they belonged or contributed to 144 organizations listed by the State Un-American Activities Committee.

They were ordered discharged for insubordination, subject to final approval by the court of last resort, which may be the Supreme Court of the United States, Kennedy said.

Kennedy's description of the Los Angeles program was part of a panel on city officer and employee problems at which Bruce J. Broady of St. Paul, Minn., presided.

Robert J. Shoup, Cleveland, Ohio, Transit Board general counsel, speaking on injunctive relief to restrain strikes by public utilities employees, said an injunction is the best method of meeting the situation "if the principle is social, as I believe."

The three-day meeting will conclude with election of officers this morning.

are taking daily losses from receipts of the fake bills.

A spokesman for the New York Federal Reserve said the member commercial banks are losing money every day because they are not tracing the counterfeit currency.

He said the fake money has been coming in every day.

Officials estimated that the amount of bogus money in the hands of the public might run into "millions of dollars."

The fake New York notes carry the large letter "G" in the left-hand ring on the face of the bill, which usually indicates issuance by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. Legal currency issued in New York carries the letter "B."

A bank spokesman in New York said the bills are so nearly perfect that the counterfeiters might have been able to fool everyone for some time, if they had used the letter "B" on the bills in circulation.

With the chest's failure to reach its goal, family agencies and child care agencies will be forced to limit services, he said. This will be true for hospital care, clinics, bedside nursing through visiting nurses and recreational programs for youth.

Parker's praise for the efforts of some 20,000 volunteer workers in the drive was tempered with this pointed conclusion:

"Thousands of metropolitan Washingtonians have not merely lagged in contributing through the federation; they have shamefully shirked their duty by not giving at all."

Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post, was a speaker at the final report meeting at the Washington Hotel.

He exhorted Chest workers to join a "year-round publicity campaign" for the future. He predicted that the total reported for 1949 "is not all the money you are going to get by any means if you follow up your efforts."

"The Community Chest formula is not proving itself a failure," he added. "A few years ago, the goal was only two million dollars. Now you have raised almost $3,500,000."

Chairman Parker urged continuing efforts by workers, although the campaign has officially closed, through final appeals to persons who may have been overlooked, those who contributed in past years and failed this year, and call-backs on previous contracts.

2 Killers Reprieved, Escape Chair by 21-Minute Margin

appointed day of execution between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Six reporters who were to serve as official witnesses were at the jail by 9:30 a. m.

They were greeted by Director of Corrections Donald Clemmer, Col. Curtis Reid, jail superintendent, and other officials. Soon Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, and Dr. Martin L. Cannon, jail physician, arrived.

"The Court of Appeals will convene at 11 o'clock to hear the appeal," Clemmer announced shortly after returning from a telephone call.

The hour came and passed. The reporters were taken to lunch.

"Just coffee—I'm not hungry," said one reporter. He left the jail immediately after lunch.

The official party returned to Colonel Reid's office and the tension increased. There were quick glances at wrist watches as the hour passed 1 o'clock.

The reporters were told that defense motions had been denied by the Court of Appeals, that defense attorneys were going to the Supreme Court to appeal the ruling.

"District Attorney Fay has told the Court of Appeals that execution will be postponed until 1:45 if necessary," somebody said.

"We can't execute two men in 15 minutes," grumbled one jail official.

Several more long minutes passed and then Clemmer announced that Fay had gone into conference with Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens of the Court of Appeals and would ask the court to decide whether execution should be stayed in view of possible further legal steps by the defense.

"We'll go upstairs and see what happens," Clemmer said.

The reporters were herded into an elevator, rode to the fourth floor and then entered a room partitioned from the death room by glass panels. Clemmer took up his post at a fourth-floor telephone.

Through the glass the reporters could see the electric chair sitting in the center of the death room.

Guards walked silently in the room. They examined the helmets that would be placed on the heads of the two men.

"Have you ever seen two men executed on the same day?" a reporter asked of one guard in the witness room.

"I saw six in one day," he said, "when they executed the Nazi spies."

Now the hands of watches were straining toward 2 o'clock. At 1:43, Thomas R. Sard, Clemmer's executive assistant, entered the witness room and said:

"It's been called off—called off until Tuesday at 10 a. m."

Word of the stay was flashed to Clemmer at 1:39 from the Court of Appeals. It meant that the two convicted slayers must once again appear in District Court before 10 a. m. Tuesday for resentencing.

How did Wheeler and Patton take the news of their last-minute stay of execution? With stunned acceptance, was the way Colonel Reid described it.

"They've nerved themselves up to such a pitch," said Colonel Reid, "that the reaction won't set in for several hours."

It did. At 4:30 p. m., they were as gleeful as two kids let loose from school on a holiday and directed a flood of excited questions at Colonel Reid when he visited them in their cells.

The exulting wait at the jail resulted from legal steps taken by James J. Laughlin, Wheeler's attorney, and Wesley S. Williams and Curtis P. Mitchell, counsel for Patton.

On Thursday they submitted motions on technical arguments to District Court Judge Richmond B. Keach. Mitchell interpreted one point of law to mean the men could not be executed before 1950.

Keach denied the motions. Appeals were filed with the Court of Appeals yesterday. These, too, were denied after lengthy arguments and after Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray had said:

"They (the defense attorneys) can keep the execution open until someone dies, including Government counsel, if the court should permit a delay."

Chief Judge Stephens and Associate Judges Wilbur K. Miller and E. Barrett Prettyman considered the defense motions. Chief Judge Stephens announced the denial at 12:22 p. m.

Defense attorneys then asked for further time to carry the appeals to the Supreme Court. Chief Judge Stephens instructed United States Attorney George Morris Fay to tell the jail not to execute the men before 1:45 p. m.

Goes Into Conference

A short time later, Fay went into conference with the judges. According to Joseph W. Stewart, clerk of the Court of Appeals, it was decided that if Wheeler and Patton were still alive at 2 p. m., they would in effect be "living dead men," unless the court took action.

The possibility that this might leave a loophole for the men to escape death or even, possibly, gain freedom was suggested. Then the court decided to order the stay of execution.

Laughlin was at the Supreme Court when word of the stay reached him. He announced he would delay filing a formal petition of appeal with the Supreme Court until Monday.

Court attaches speculated that Wheeler and Patton probably would be brought into District Court Monday to hear the new execution date set.

Dr. Brooks to Preach

Truman Act Highlights Press Party

President Truman, who couldn't go to the National Press Club's recent father-and-son night, last night attended the club's first father-and-daughter evening with his "little" girl Margaret.

The President, who headed a long list of distinguished fathers present, brought the program to a climax by teaming with Margaret in a piano duet, "Jenny Lind Polka."

It was a number "daddy taught me when I was 10," the President's daughter said, "and I don't think we have played it since."

"I belong to a union," she explained, "so I got special dispensation for a nonunion member."

"As Others See Them"

Following the polka, the President, emotion in his voice, said it had been a most happy evening for him. "I do appreciate the privilege of seeing things once in a while as others see them."

Among the 500 fathers and daughters present were Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder and daughter, Druce, and other high Government officials and members of the club's board of governors.

Miss Snyder and her father brought laughs in a take-off of a radio interview titled "Finance by the Fireside."

Quizzing her father about the public debt, Miss Snyder asked, "Why do we have it in the first place?"

"Because we know all we owe we owe to our country," the Secretary replied.

Other Notables Appear

Among others on the program were Walter Pidgeon, screen star; Peter Lind Hayes, radio and stage star; Paul Winchell, ventriloquist; Leon Navara, pianist; Jane and Betty Kean, singing and dancing stars; Johnny Radford, radio singer, the National Press Club Chorus and an United States Navy Band orchestra.

The dinner came about when some of the club's fathers of daughters complained, following the recent fathers-and-sons dinner, that the gentle sex was being neglected.

Last night every daughter received an orchid and a gift as she entered the door. Because of limited space, only one daughter was allowed per father.

Triduum Next Week

The Immaculate Conception Church, 8th and N sts. nw. will hold a triduum in honor of its patroness Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The services will consist of triduum prayers, sermon and benediction of the most blessed sacrament. The sermons will be preached by the parish priests.

Skeleton Plan Advocated for Civil Defense

A Pentagon civil defense official yesterday recommended establishment of "skeleton" emergency forces in municipalities as the first step toward establishment of complete programs.

The official, Roger H. Weed, legal consultant to the Office of Civil Defense Planning, emphasized that the entire civil defense plan at present is "no more than a report from one planning group to the Secretary of Defense."

He told a meeting of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers at the Mayflower Hotel that the office developed the civil defense program as the "sound" basis for establishment of a permanent organization available for disasters such as floods or earthquakes, as well as actual wartime needs.

Weed explained that the program differed in this respect from the World War II Office of Civilian Defense, which was a temporary group expanding as needs developed.

At present, "the most important thing" for city and State officials to do was to study the plan and "get behind State legislation" enabling it to go into effect, Weed said.

In the District, a police reserve corps was authorized by the District Commissioners, but was withdrawn pending further action on the Federal civil defense plan.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, has declared in favor of formation of a "paper" civil defense organization consisting of officials designated to head various emergency corps. These officials could study training, equipment and personnel needs until action is taken to put the program into effect.

Bessie Nichols Free to Wed

The gates to Prince Georges County Jail opened wide for blonde Bessie Nichols yesterday, leaving her virtually unencumbered to pursue a romance which even the prison's stony walls couldn't extinguish.

Bessie's original arrest resulted from her participation, with two youths, in the holdup and robbery of a District cab driver near Brandywine, Md. Her two companions in the escapade are serving time in Virginia, where all three were later picked up, and where Bessie served five months before being returned to Maryland.

New Grace Church To Be Dedicated

The new Grace Episcopal Church, 3601 Russell rd., Alexandria, will be dedicated at 3 p. m. Sunday.

Bishop Frederick Goodwin of the Diocese of Virginia will conduct the services assisted by the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, Jr., of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Alexandria. Grace Church formerly was at 207 S. Patrick st., Alexandria.

Secretary, Mr. Roberts, secretary of the Connecticut council of churches, has been secretary of the federal council since 1944. Election of the officers was unanimous.

Bishop Stamm, president of the Pennsylvania council of churches and of the Evangelical School of Technology, Reading, Pa., was a member of the American committee of Provincial World Council of Churches, was a delegate to that body's first assembly in Amsterdam last summer, and was elected a member of the 90-man central committee which governs the world council between assemblies.

In accepting his election, Bishop Stamm said the "task facing the churches can only be accomplished if the thought, prayer and service of the churches are pooled in a larger way."

Washingtonians who attended the meeting were: Northern Baptist, the Rev. E. H. Pruden; National Baptist, the Rev. W. H. Jeragin and the Rev. C. T. Murray; Congregational Christian, Walter G. Daniel; Evangelical and Reformed, Dr. Charles Enders; and Protestant Episcopal, the Rev. John W. Urgess.

Segregation End Indorsed
The rich gifts which God imparts to man should be available to all without distinction as to race, color, sex, birth, nationality or creed.

Segregation in education and cultural opportunities were scored, and the report demanded equal services for all in theaters, hotels, stores and restaurants.

The church, the document concluded, must go beyond the requirements of the law and seek vigorously to realize these principles of human rights wherever they apply within their own fellowships.

A resolution calling upon the United States to refrain from forming a military alliance or giving economic support to the Franco regime in Spain was approved in principle and referred to the council's department of international justice and good will for study and report to the executive committee.

The department, headed by Dr. Edwin E. Aubrey, professor at the University of Pennsylvania, will meet on January 18 in New York to take action on the resolution.

Greater Lay Participation
Greater lay participation in the programs of the churches was called for by another of the reports adopted. It urged that members realize that the primary work of the church is not done on Sunday or in the church, but seven days a week and in the homes and businesses of church people.

Ministry to older people has become one of the most crucial emerging areas for study and action by the churches, another report stated. It urged that the church see older people as an integral part of the Christian community.

A report on relief and rehabilitation for Europe, Asia, and the Near East was also adopted by the delegates. It said Asia has become a most critical spot and urged Christians to give immediate assistance to the millions of people in that area.

It also recommended that the council lay the desperate needs of the approximately half million Arab refugees in Palestine and surrounding lands, upon the conscience of Christian people.

The report referred to the council, through one of its departments, the responsibility of seeking a change in the present displaced persons law to simplify clearance requirements and to remove the barriers which now retard the entire resettlement program.

Bank Replies to Church Body On Criticism of Capitalism

New York, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The National City Bank today issued a defense of capitalism in reply to a report of the World Council of Churches which rejected both the communistic and capitalistic ideologies.

The council neither accepted nor approved the report but commended it to the churches for "appropriate" action.

The bank answered four charges in the report in its December letter.

The first charged capitalism with tending to "subordinate... human needs to the economic advantages of those who have most power over its institutions."

The bank answered that capitalistic production does nothing but satisfy human needs by putting more and more kinds of goods within reach of more and more people.

The bank admitted the second charge, that capitalism tends to produce serious inequalities.

Bethesda Church Maintains Library of Religious Books

"EX-LIBRIS"—Miss Margaret Hill reads one of the books in the recently organized lending library of St. John's Episcopal Church, Bethesda. The Rev. William F. Creighton, rector of the church, looks over her shoulder.

Need a book on how to read the Bible, or Christian solutions of personality problems? The new lending library at St. John's Episcopal Church, Bradley la. and Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, can help you.

Organized in October, the library meets the needs of church members and Bethesda residents for specialized books on religion. The Rev. William F. Creighton, rector of St. John's, pointed out that the church library supplements the material in the public library, and attempts to avoid duplication.

Plans for the library were made by the Martha and Mary Guild of the church. Since then a Library Guild, with representatives of every organization in the parish, has been organized to handle the project.

Housed in a room of the office wing of the recently built church, the library was decorated and furnished by members of St. John's. Anyone may browse around, sign out books, or settle back to read in one of the comfortable chairs. Members of other churches in the community are welcome to use the library facilities.

The range of books is great. The present collection of more than 200 volumes includes such diverse titles as "The Keys to the Kingdom," "The Christian Roots of Democracy in America," and "The Parson Takes a Wife." Children's books are a special feature, and the library is popular.

The church will formally observe its silver anniversary at 8 p. m. Wednesday. It was organized in 1923 by Henry W. O. Millington, executive secretary of the District Baptist Convention.

Peace Prayer Drive Opened At Georgetown

A movement for Americans to pause each day at noon to offer a one-minute prayer for peace has been instigated by the student council of Georgetown University.

The idea was first suggested, according to the Hoyt, student newspaper, by an American foreign service officer before a Manchester (N. H.), American Legion post.

Later, a special committee of veterans of the Army and Navy, Union last night urged Governors of the 48 States, urging adoption of the plan by civic, educational and veterans' groups throughout the Nation. The committee chairman is Col. G. H. Maines of Flint, Mich.

The resolution passed this week by the Georgetown student council suggests active steps to interest other colleges in the plan.

FOR FAMOUS MAKES

'Round Our Town Two Bowl Games Listed Here Today

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

Cancel those reservations for Pasadena, New Orleans and Miami. We have three bowl games right here in town.

Two of them will be played this morning at 11 a. m. on the tradition-festooned Ellipse. That's the scene of the Little Potato Bowl and the Big Potato Bowl, which will decide the two boys' club championships of the city.

Standing about 90 pounds big, the Trinidad Boys Club and Police Boys Club No. 11 will play in the Little Potato, while Georgetown Boys Club and Police Boys Club No. 5 will compete for 105-pound honors. None of the four teams have been beaten this year. What other bowl can make this statement.

And on Sunday, the Georgetown All-Stars meet the Northeast Hawks in the third annual Capital Bowl at Gonzaga High School at 1 p. m.

Quick Change Artists

Trinidad Boys Club, hardly waiting for its bowl fever to cool off, moves into basketball on Monday with an organization meeting at the Ingram Memorial Church, 10th st. and Massachusetts ave., at 4 p. m. Teams will be organized in all classes from 80 pounds to unlimited.

Basketball Clinics

The YMCA has also felt the nip in the air and seen the first starling and has scheduled a basketball clinic for Tuesday evening at the Y gym. Starting time will be 7:15. J. Dallas Shirley, chairman of the basketball officials of D. C., will hold forth on the rules of the game and will follow his lecture with a question and answer period. The George Washington freshmen under Coach John Poston, will model the newest fashions in basketball plays and offensive formations.

Back and Forth

If you think you're pretty good at knocking little plastic balls against a plywood table, here's your chance to get some recognition. The District Table Tennis Association, the official around this area for people who like to pick up little plastic balls, has scheduled a ranking tournament for Washington and the surrounding area, to be held Friday evening, December 17, at the District Table Tennis Courts, 403 11th st. n.w. The tournament will result in the publication of an annual D. C. Table Tennis Ranking for 1948.

Congressional Election

The women's golf committee of Congressional County Club met yesterday and appointed a slate of officers for the incoming year. The incoming officers are: Mrs. Frank B. Helan, chairman; Mrs. S. S. Bruce, first vice chairman; Mrs. E. S. Hanson, second vice chairman; Mrs. B. L. Eberts, secretary; and Mrs. Philip O. Pelland, treasurer. Mrs. Charles Penn is the retiring chairman. The committee yesterday decided to appoint an advisory board, composed of former chairmen and chairmen of subcommittees. Mrs. Ralph Payne was appointed chairman of the advisory board.

Quantico Wraps Up East Coast Title, Beats Amphibis, 18-0

Victory 23d Straight for Marines

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Quantico, Va., Dec. 3.—Turning back every assault of the Little Creek, Va., amphibious forces and striking three times themselves, the Quantico Marines won the Navy's East Coast football championship today, 18 to 0.

More than 3000 hardy souls, including Gen. C. B. Cates, commanding general of the Marine Corps, sat through a constant rain to watch the mud battle.

The triumph for the Devil Dogs was their eleventh straight this year and their twenty-third in a row over a two-year span. Next stop for Maj. Hal Harwood's seemingly unstoppable Leathernecks is Norfolk, Va., where on December 11, they defend their all-Navy title against the San Diego Marines.

Ambrosi, Tamillo Star

The Marines scored in every quarter except the last which was a 6-0-0 lead when the game was only 4 minutes old, made it 12 to 0 midway the second period, and wound up their offensive with a final touchdown in the third quarter.

In compliance with the armed forces recent edict of officer-enlisted men fraternization, a second lieutenant and a sergeant led the Marines to their triumph. Lieut. Dick Ambrosi of Philadelphia, went over for two Marine touchdowns while Sgt. Joe Tamillo of Duluth, Minn., scored the third.

Ambrosi's first touchdown was a 34-yard play after George Greco's 51-yard drive advanced. Former Navy Fullback Joe Bartos ate up 20 yards of the drive with an off-tackle smash and Ambrosi followed this with his 34-yard payoff run.

51-Yard Run Nullified

Tamillo, fancy stepping former Minnesota U. freshman, breezed 46 unmoored yards in the second quarter for his score. The run came in the first play after Greco's 51-yard touchdown run on a punt return was nullified by a penalty for clipping.

To make it 15 to 0 in the third quarter, Ambrosi raced 12 yards after End Ernie Hargett of Angleton, Tex., had reclaimed a fumble for the ballhawking Marines.

Bogged down by the goo and the fast charging Marine line, the Little Creek club could do practically nothing. Their attempts to run through the Marine line netted them a minus 30 yards rushing. They completed four of the nine passes they attempted for 51 yards. The winners made 186 yards in the mud, a remarkable achievement in view of the sloppy play.

The Sailors passed midfield only twice all day. Their deepest penetration was to the Quantico 44. IN SHORT—The Amphibians had an 8-2 record until today. Joe Bartos reentered his right knee in the third quarter and may miss the title game against San Diego in Norfolk, December 11. The San Diego-Quantico affair will kickoff the National wide polo drive. Bill Stern will air the game on a coast-to-coast hookup and all the top brass of the Navy and Marine Corps will be on hand for the tussle. The Quantico team is a well coached unit fully capable of giving college teams a rough afternoon. They'll play in Maryland's Byrd Stadium December 18 against unheralded Bragg in the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce's welfare fund benefit.

'Skins Figure Specialists On The Way Out

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

George Preston Marshall, whose Washington Redskins close their home season Sunday against the Los Angeles Rams, yesterday took a look into the future of his own club.

Marshall let it become known that he thinks the day of the specialist in football is on the wane. He wants his players of the future to be all-around performers.

"The Redskins in the future will dispense with as much specialization as possible," quoth Marshall. "We're going to the December 20 draft meeting in Philadelphia looking for college boys who can perform as well on defense as offense. And we want 'em versatile on offense."

Marshall, of course, would not divulge the names of players sought by the 'Skins, what with owners of nine other National Football League clubs listening, but the caliber of at least five new players already lined up by the Redskins bears out the versatility theme.

Alabama's Harry Gilmer, whose leg injury has limited him to six plays all year, naturally looms large in '49 plans. He'll eventually replace Sammy Baugh as the team's passer, but he'll also do a lot of running. He can go like a streak.

Halfback Joe Bartos, if he's able to get his release as a Quantico Marine, is tabbed as both a ball-carrying and defensive wizard. The former Naval Academy star was claimed by the 'Skins as a free agent.

Texas Christian University is expected to furnish the answer to Washington fullback queries in the person of Pete Stout, the Big Thunder from Throckmorton, a 207-pound pliedriver. Draft rights to Stout were obtained in a trade which also brought Halfback Howie Livingston to Washington from the New York Giants in exchange for All-American Charley Conerly.

Two selections in last year's draft are also expected to improve the 'Skins. Halfback Brian Bell, Jr., the former Western High all-purpose back, has been a star for three seasons at Washington and Lee University. Center Tommy Thompson, at William and Mary, is touted by the Redskins as one of the best pivots.

Miss Prime Wins 13th Race of '48

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3. J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime, 1948 queen of tracks less than a mile, turned in her thirteenth victory of the year in 21 tries here today.

The 4-year-old filly, dubbed "Prime Rib of Horse," won by two lengths in the John Winther Heron Purse, featuring a rather dismal day at the races. With Jockey Eddie Balenger aboard, Miss Prime made it five wins in her last six outings.

Behind the daughter of Swashbuckler today was some expensive equine flesh and bones, including E. P. Price's Stanley, which finished second; J. H. Hammond's Butler, which wound up third, as well as D. G. Smith's Blue Falcon, an expensive horse as a yearling and otherwise.

Miss Prime, carrying 116 pounds, a rather light assignment for her, was well liked by the fans and paid a $4.20 mutuel despite the known class of her opposition.

The winning chestnut filly, saddled by Mrs. G. A. Saporta, prominent Monkton, Md., trainer, was clocked in 52 4/5 for the about 4 1/2 furlongs. The oval was heavy and soggy, additional rain having fallen last night and this morning.

When the break came, Belstan, Bulrushes and Impression were most prominent, with Miss Prime, Stanley and Butler well placed. Belstan dropped back but Impression and Bulrushes kept driving.

Leaving the backstretch, Miss Prime and Stanley moved together on the outside and took over the lead, as Bulrushes and Impression faltered in the stretch. Miss Prime gradually disposed of Stanley and was opening a gap at the end. Butler rallied and came on with a bold rush that was good only to take the third money from the tiring Belstan.

Jockey Jimmy Baird and Caslin, his fourth race mount, went down in the fourth race, but both boy and horse escaped injury. Max Pearson, his agent, said Baird, who canceled his remaining mounts today, would be back in action tomorrow.

This race was won by Sticky Fussy, owned by A. August of Washington, D.C., and paid $6.80 while under good handling by Jockey Willie Billington.

The daily double paid $25.40. J. K. Wynkoop's New Hour won the opener at $4.60 and Shangri-la Stables' Doctor Teep earned the second at $6.60.

Terps Meet Temple in Opener

Catholic, Marines Play Here

Maryland opens its 1948-49 basketball season in grand style tonight, meeting strong Temple in the first game of a double-header at Philadelphia's Convention Hall. St. Joseph's faces Tennessee in the nightcap.

Other games involving local teams find Catholic University entertaining Marine Headquarters at 8:30 p. m., and American visiting Brooklyn Poly, both tonight.

Coach Flucie Stewart's starting team will look very much like his 1947 Terp club. Freshman Lee Brawley, a drawing 6 foot, 3 inch Navy veteran, is the only new-comer who'll crash the first team. Johnny Edwards, Spencer Wright, Frank Amosworthy and Ed Crescence are all back, with Crescence the only player under the 6 foot, 1 inch mark.

Both C. U. and American got off on the right foot this week. Catholic, paced by veterans Jack Walsh, Gene Szklarz and George Laubacher, bowled over Towson Teachers, 65-30. American impressively whipped its Alumni, Towson and Connecticut before meeting St. Francis of Brooklyn last night.

Coach Abe Rosenfield was encouraged about Catholics opening game performances.

The 65-36 win over the Towson Teachers had a salutary effect on the squad, Rosenfield believes. It proved that the Cards can win with the slower, more deliberate system their new coach has installed, and the accuracy at the basket means more than break-neck speed in midcourt.

The team broke stride a couple of times and lapsed into a free-wheeling style, but Rosenfield believes it will settle down and begin to play as a unit in the next couple of games.

The Card coach was pleased with the work of Rookie Jim Lusty. Lusty's five field goals showed he has a good eye and will be a power in the scoring column. Another pleasant surprise was Jack Walsh's scoring. The veteran guard, however, had more shots and better shots than he got last year and Rosenfield believes he'll help the team over many rough spots this year.

Fred (Ox) Connor, George (Spike) Laubacher at center, and Szklarz will round out the starting five against the Marines.

The preliminary game is scheduled at 7:15.

AAU Approves 40 Records

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Forty swimming records were approved, boxing rules were modified to reduce injuries and championship sites for 1949 were selected today as delegates to the sixtieth National AAU convention got down to serious business.

A day filled with committee hearings, behind-the-scenes maneuvering and a few disappointments for rejected tournament seekers also produced these major developments:

1. San Francisco was selected as the site of the 1949 convention, to be held December 1, 2 and 3.
2. The track and field committee voted to award the 1949 meet to Fresno, Calif., and the decathlon championships to Tulare, Calif., home town of Olympic titlist Bob Mathias.
3. The basketball committee decided that the 1949 men's cage tournament should go to Oklahoma City despite a determined effort by Denver to entertain the court meet for the fifteenth straight year.
4. Arrangements were made for numerous individuals and teams from foreign countries to compete in this country in 1949, perhaps including a bobsled crew from Germany which would be the first group from that conquered nation to participate in international athletics since the war.

Most Valuable Castoff

Dubious About Making Bucs, Murtaugh Receives 52 Votes

Chester, Pa., Dec. 3 (AP).—Winning 52 votes in the National League's most valuable player poll is quite a feat for a little fellow who didn't even thing he'd last the 16 days necessary to collect his pension.

Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals won the award, but he couldn't be any prouder of his 303 votes than little Danny Murtaugh is of his 52.

"I wasn't worried about making the team in spring training," said Danny. "I was just dubious. And those 16 days I needed to become eligible for a pension never left my mind."

Murtaugh, second baseman for the Pittsburgh Pirates, shook his head wonderingly and muttered, "Humph. Imagine that, 52 votes. It's wonderful."

It's easy to understand why the second sacker was so surprised and pleased. His has been a real case of up and down the baseball ladder.

Murtaugh came up from Houston of the Texas League in 1941 to the Philadelphia Phillies. He became a brilliant fielder and in 1942 led the National League in stealing bases.

In 1943 Murtaugh entered the Army and served in both Germany and Japan. He returned to the Phillies in 1946 but the following season found himself with Rochester of the International League. The Boston Braves bought Danny and sent him to their Milwaukee farm where he set an American Association fielding record of 37 consecutive errorless games.

That performance brought him to the rejuvenated Pirates of 1948. Pirate Manager Bill Meyer described the 30-year-old Murtaugh as "just about the best second baseman in the league."

Frostbite Regatta Today

The Weather Bureau has promised clear skies and mild temperatures, but regardless, the second annual Frostbite Regatta will begin today at 1 p. m. as scheduled on the Potomac, just off the Corinthian Yacht Club, 2d and V sts. sw.

Hosts are George Washington, Georgetown and Maryland Universities. Migrating here to help them close the fall collegiate sailing season will be crews from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Boston College, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Cornell.

Because the boats of the Northern schools are already locked in winter storage, G.W. will furnish all the teams with Tempest class dinghies. Five races are on tap for today, and four others will take place Sunday at 9 a. m.

Each of the three home schools has nominated two candidates for the title of Frostbite Queen. The winner will be announced just before the first race today, and she will reign tonight at the Frostbite Ball at 9:30 at Bethesda Country Club.

Archie Moore Comes to Town

St. Louis' Archie Moore, outstanding light-heavyweight contender, is in town to wind up training for his 10-round headliner with Bob Amos, 21-year-old scrapper from Detroit, at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Moore, who his handlers say is in the best shape of his career, is working out with a battery of sparmates at Liberty A. C. The hard wallowing battler, who has a kayo over Jimmy Bivins and wins over Lloyd Marshall and Curtis Sheppard to his credit, is touted as a 6-5 favorite to win from the young and dangerous Amos.

Four preliminaries have been announced for Monday's show by Matchmaker Gabe Menendez. Jesse Baker of Roanoke, Va., goes against Grandison Jones. In a four-five-round semi-windup. Other fives find Jackie Ford against "Sluggo" White and Roy Wirt against Brandon Jones. In a four-rounder Rufus Berry meets Walter Parks.

Amos is slated to arrive here early tomorrow to finish up training at Billy Edwards' gym.

Edward Lee of the New York Athletic Club won the championship yesterday.

Lions Lose 17th, 6-3, to Indianapolis

The Washington Lions last night proved themselves the weakest team in either division of the American Hockey League, dropping a 6-3 judgment to the Indianapolis Caps at Uline Arena.

As 1820 fans looked on, the Lions dropped their seventeenth game in 23 starts, 3 of them ties, to remain in the Eastern Division cellar.

The Caps, on four third-period goals, moved out of the Western Division cellar into fourth place ahead of Cleveland. Gordon Haidy, Nelson Podolsky, Pat Lundy and Ed Brunetau tallied in the final session, for the winners.

Welder, 23, Dies After Car Strikes Light Pole

Merle Heilman, Jr., Injured Wednesday
After 'Few Beers,' Wife Tells Police

D. C. traffic deaths this year... 63
Deaths this date last year... 67
Total traffic deaths last year... 72

A 23-year-old welder died of traffic injuries yesterday—a tragic ending to a ride home which his wife, an expectant mother, declined because he had had about three beers.

Merle E. Heilman, Jr., an employe of the Culp Co., Silver Spring, was injured Wednesday morning when his car struck a light pole on Michigan ave. ne. in front of Trinity College.

Before setting out, according to police, Mrs. Heilman declined to ride with her husband and decided to take a cab, apparently concerned about the baby she is expecting in January.

Heilman and his wife, Dolores, were staying temporarily at 418 Oneida pl. nw.

Police said Mrs. Heilman and a friend, Mrs. Marjorie Childs, 418 Peabody st. nw., had met late Tuesday at the Ding How Restaurant, 1419 Irving st. nw.

Heilman came in, joined them, and drank about three beers, police quoted Mrs. Heilman as saying. Mrs. Heilman asked Mrs. Childs to ride with Heilman in his car and Mrs. Heilman caught a taxi cab, police recounted.

Police said Heilman lost control of his car while rounding a curve, careened across a sidewalk and struck the pole. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital with head and back injuries.

He was charged by police with failure to give full time and attention to the operation of his vehicle.

Mrs. Childs told police she suffered only slight rib injuries. She was taken to Casualty Hospital and released shortly after the accident.

7 Named for Council Posts By County Charter Committee

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

The names of seven persons who have been given the powerful support of the Montgomery County charter committee for the posts of councilman under the new charter were made public yesterday.

Selected were six men and a woman, four of whom are Democrats and the other three Republicans. They are:

Mrs. Himstead P. Garland, Ligon, Council District No. 1, a Democrat. A county resident since 1908, Ligon is a construction engineer of Brinklow Md.

Augustus R. Selby, Council District No. 2, a Republican. A 30-year resident of the county, Selby, who lives in Germantown, Md., owns a flour and feed mill.

Thomas C. Kelley, Council District No. 3, a Republican. An attorney and former Orphans' Court judge, Kelley, who lives in Darnestown, Md., has spent most of his life in Montgomery County.

Mrs. Dorothy S. Himstead, Council District No. 4, a Democrat. A housewife, former teacher and a leader of the County League of Women Voters, Mrs. Himstead of 210 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, has been a county resident since 1936.

J. Douglas Bradshaw, Council District No. 5, a Republican. An attorney, World War II veteran and corporation counsel for Takoma Park, Bradshaw of 123 Anne st., Takoma Park, has lived continuously in the county since 1929.

Frederic P. Lee, at-large candidate, a Democrat. A charter leader since the "home rule" move was inaugurated, Lee is a practicing attorney in Washington and lives at 6915 Glenbrook rd., Bethesda. A two-term president of the Montgomery Civic Federation, he has served as legislative counsel to the Senate.

Dr. Lewis Meriam, at-large candidate, a Democrat. A Harvard graduate with law degrees from two schools, Meriam, who lives in Kensington, is vice president of the Brookings Institution, and participated in the Brookings survey of Montgomery County, which gave rise to the charter movement.

Shift in Majority

If the slate of seven is elected, it was pointed out yesterday, the populous suburban areas of Bethesda and Silver Spring will have a 4-to-3 majority on the council. At present the situation is the reverse.

The seven persons named to the slate were picked from about 125 suggested nominees submitted by county groups, associations and individuals, according to Allen H. Gardner, chairman of the charter group's nominating committee.

That the seven candidates are virtually assured of election is conceded in most county circles. The belief is based on the fact that both major political parties have refused to endorse their own slate, and Democrats have promised to support the charter slate.

A charter council election is slated for January 6, and the charter adopted by county voters last election day provides that the new body will take office on January 10. Legal action aimed at blocking the election initiated last week by four county commissioners, all Republicans, and until a final ruling is obtained, the holding of the election will be in doubt.

The commissioners, who now are interim "councilmen" under the charter, which became effective Thursday, are contending there is no authority under State law for the special election.

Called 'Outstanding'

If the slate is successful, the interim "councilmen" will remain in office until 1950, when the next regular election is scheduled, instead of being replaced by the elected county council.

Describing all seven candidates as "outstanding," Gardner yesterday said he was "gratified" they had consented to run. "It is a popular misconception that one of the weak links in the chain of local government is the customary refusal of the leading citizens to run for public office," he said.

The nominating committee's approved slate has been supported by the charter committee's board of directors and will be presented to the entire charter committee at the group's annual dinner meeting next Thursday.

There are only two other avowed candidates thus far: Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park housewife, and Romeo W. Horad, a leader of the county Negro community.

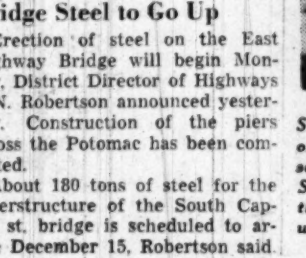

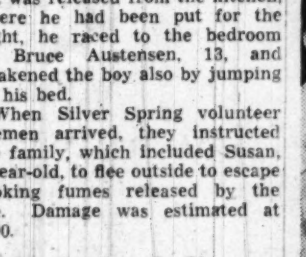

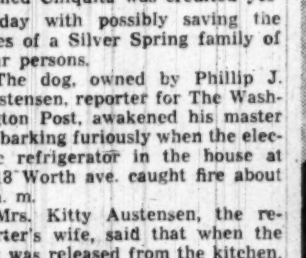

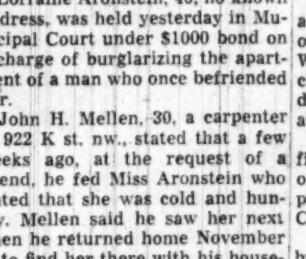

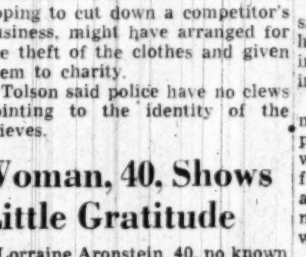

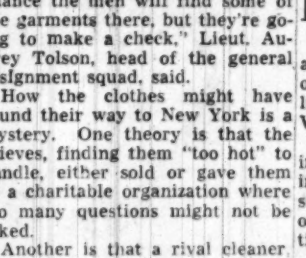

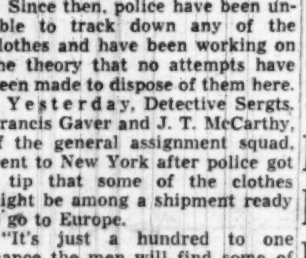

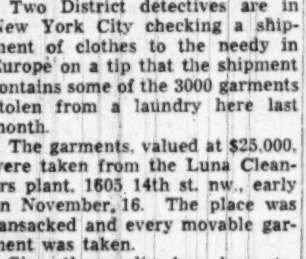

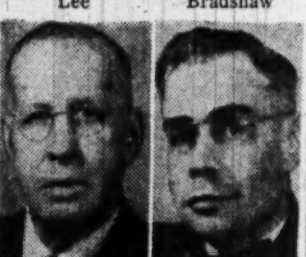

Two New Polio Cases in Area; Total Now 265

Two new polio cases were reported by the District Health Department yesterday, raising the Greater Washington total for the year to 265, as compared with 56 for this date last year.

The new cases were a 2-year-old boy of the 800 block of Callan st. ne. at Children's Hospital and a 16-year-old boy of the Georgetown Preparatory School, Garrett Park, Md. The last named was diagnosed several weeks ago when two other cases were reported at the school, but was not reported until yesterday.

The District total is now 133 and the nearby Maryland and Virginia figures are 132.

Gallinger Hospital reported no change last night in the critical condition of Mrs. Marilyn Stratman, 24-year-old mother of two, of 9620 Silgo Creek pkwy., Silver Spring, stricken with bulbar poliomyelitis.

Colasanto Ouster Move Is Reported

Council Majority
At Alexandria
Said to Have Acted
At Secret Meeting

A move by Alexandria City councilmen to oust City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto was reported yesterday by a reliable source.

It was reported that at a secret unofficial meeting called this week to discuss the matter, a majority of the seven councilmen expressed dissatisfaction with Colasanto.

A committee was appointed to tell Colasanto the council is not satisfied with his work and "would like a change in the city manager's office." The source said that the next move is up to Colasanto.

All seven members of council attended the meeting and pledged themselves to secrecy, it was stated.

Hard at work in his City Hall office yesterday, Colasanto declined comment on questions as to whether he had been asked or intended to resign. Each councilman also offered a stout "No comment."

There was no indication of what specific actions had prompted the council members. But Colasanto, a former practicing lawyer in the city, has been under fire from one source or another most of his 13 months in office.

His appointment brought protest at a council meeting from nearly 200 residents who thought they were to get an experienced city manager. More recently, Councilman Marshall J. Beverley demanded Colasanto's resignation at a council meeting.

It is not certain what the council might do if Colasanto refuses to resign and forces it either to keep him or fire him. Most of the members of the old council are gone. Of the holdovers, Mayor William T. Wilkins and R. Samuel Luckett opposed his appointment, and John W. Tulloch favored it.

However, both Wilkins and Luckett defended Colasanto from Beverley's attack. They said that he "might not be the best, but he's the hardest working city manager the city will ever have." The three other new councilmen have not publicly indicated their views.

Falls Church Plagued by Firecrackers

Falls Church Police are getting anything but a bang out of what one cop called "firecracker hoodlums" in the normally peaceful Virginia city.

Police Chief E. H. Howe, keeping a wary eye cocked for smoldering fuses, declared yesterday he is seeking a city law to crack down on firecracker sales and detonation.

Over the past several months, he said, he and city officials have heard "numerous" complaints from irate citizens disturbed by exploding cherry bombs.

The present city ordinance merely makes it unlawful "for any person to set off or fire any fireworks in any street or within 20 feet of any building." And that, according to police, gives the noise-happy small fry a pretty wide range.

"Why only last night, a boy on a bike threw a cracker at the foot of a woman walking along South Washington st.," declared the police chief. "Her burns required a doctor's treatment." She was unable to identify the boy to police.

Captain Howe pointed out that firecrackers are sold in at least one city store, and in several places in adjoining Fairfax County.

His new law, currently studied by the Falls Church City Council, would ban outright the sale, purchase, transportation, possession and firing of fireworks.

Family of 4 Roused by Dog As Fire Breaks Out in Night

A 9-year-old cocker spaniel named Chiquita was credited yesterday with possibly saving the lives of a Silver Spring family of four persons.

The dog, owned by Phillip J. Austensen, reporter for The Washington Post, awakened his master by barking furiously when the electric refrigerator in the house at 9318 Worth ave. caught fire about 3 a. m.

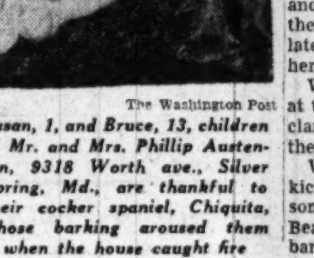

Mrs. Kitty Austensen, the reporter's wife, said that when the pet was released from the kitchen, where he had been put for the night, he raced to the bedroom of Bruce Austensen, 13, and awakened the boy also by jumping on his bed.

When Silver Spring volunteer firemen arrived, they instructed the family, which included Susan, 1-year-old, to flee outside to escape choking fumes released by the fire. Damage was estimated at $500.

Bridge Steel to Go Up

Erection of steel on the East Highway Bridge will begin Monday, District Director of Highways J. N. Robertson announced yesterday. Construction of the piers across the Potomac has been completed.

About 180 tons of steel for the superstructure of the South Capitol st. bridge is scheduled to arrive December 15, Robertson said.

Slain Police Killer Threatened to Get Officers, Testimony at Inquest in 2 Deaths Discloses

BEREAVED—Mrs. Grady Becham, wife of the slain policeman, and her daughter, Ina Lynn, comfort each other in their home, 4300 N. 18th st., Arlington, Va. The 11-year-old girl was not informed until yesterday morning that her father, Corporal Becham, of Ninth Precinct, was killed while attempting to serve a warrant on a former convict.

One shot was fired, the bullet landing in Miss Kilmer's spine. Crippled by Shot

She is a former hatcheck girl and resided at 1314 Fairmont st. nw. Since the day of the shooting, she has not walked, and is being treated at the Washington Sanitarium.

According to police, Edmondson and Holifield left the scene without reporting the incident.

Both men were indicted for assault with a dangerous weapon. Holifield was exonerated, but the jury convicted Edmondson.

Judge Holtzoff, in pronouncing sentence, said:

"By reason of the defendant's silly playfulness, a young woman was seriously injured, perhaps for life. He knew better than to play with a loaded revolver."

"Under Moral Obligation"

"He must be punished, but the court does not feel that the ends of justice would be served by imprisonment. But he is under a moral obligation to make reparation for his act as much as is humanly possible."

"You should contribute as much as you can to support the victim. She cannot care for herself, and others must do it for her."

In response to a campaign sponsored by Bill Gold, "District Line" columnist on The Washington Post, citizens have contributed $500.73. A total of $10,000 is needed for treatment.

Woman Customer Upsets Holdup
In Liquor Store

A woman customer's need for cigarettes yesterday saved a liquor store owner from being forced to hand over his receipts at gun point.

Benjamin Siegel, 52, proprietor of the Plaza Liquor Store, 200 E st. ne., told police the entrance of the woman balked an attempted holdup about 5 p. m.

Seconds before, the holdup man had headed three customers against a wall and, brandishing a .25-caliber nickel-plated revolver, ordered him to hand over his money. Siegel said the proprietor said he dropped to the floor behind the counter when the gunman turned his head to glance at the newcomer. At this, the man fled, he said.

They were arrested at the 21st st. address on October 5. Seized, police said, were $2000, numbers slips, telephones, adding machines, radios and football pool tickets.

Wilson and Lephew were taken to Police Headquarters, charged with operation of a lottery, possession of numbers slips and setting up a gaming table, and released under $3500 bond.

The next day, they appeared in Municipal Court, to find themselves charged under a warrant for lottery operation only. Bond was reduced to $1000 and the case continued until November 5.

Again they appeared, to find that the lottery operation charge was nolle prossed and possession of numbers slips substituted. Bond was reduced to $500. The case was continued until yesterday.

They showed up to find that new papers had been drawn up omitting the possession charge, and instead they were charged with lottery operation.

Defense Attorney Denny Hughes protested the apparent fickleness on the part of the prosecutor but agreed to a continuance until December 8. Thomas D. Quinn was the judge.

Rep. Bulwinkle Ill
At Naval Hospital

Representative Bulwinkle (D. N. C.) was reported to be seriously ill at the United States Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., last night.

The North Carolina Congressman entered the hospital two days ago to be treated for a spinal ailment.

House of Representatives last year, but not acted upon by the Senate.

It would raise present pension rate of $60 a month for a widow to $100, while each child under 18 would receive $25 a month. At present, $10 a month is provided for each child to age 16. The monthly pension of a widow whose husband was killed in the line of duty would be $125 under the proposal.

Contributions to the fund would be raised from 3 1/2 per cent taken from firemen's and policemen's pay, to 5 per cent.

GIVE TESTIMONY—Three children of Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong and a friend of her son testified yesterday at the coroner's inquest into the slaying of Police Corp. Grady Becham and the killing of former convict Robert Wilkerson. They are (from left) Kenneth Armstrong, 13, a son; Mrs. Doris Golden, 20, a married daughter; Howard Hubscher, 16, the friend, and Donald Armstrong, 17, another son. The fatal gun play was in Mrs. Armstrong's home.

Killer Was Loaded With Gin, Whisky And Wine, Officers Learn From Woman

Just before he killed a policeman and in turn was cut down by police shots, former convict Robert S. Wilkerson told Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong who had secretly summoned police to her home:

"If that's the police, I'll get them."

That threat was recounted yesterday to a coroner's jury investigating the deaths of Wilkerson and Police Corp. Grady A. Becham, 40, of 4300 N. 18th st., Arlington.

Corporal Becham was slain by a shotgun blast fired by Wilkerson. Becham and Pts. Harvey C. Womble and Roy R. Swank had responded to a call at the 1601 Montello ave. ne. home of Mrs. Armstrong, who had repeatedly sought police aid during the four years Wilkerson was her suitor.

Ballistics Report Awaited

After hearing testimony from police officers and others, the inquest yesterday was recessed pending a ballistics report to determine which policeman fired the shots that killed 40-year-old Wilkerson.

Sergeant John K. Baker of the homicide squad testified that before Corporal Becham died he fired two shots at Wilkerson from his Colt service revolver, and five shots were fired from the six-shot Smith & Wesson revolver of Womble. Baker said the FBI is now checking both weapons and the battered slugs that struck Wilkerson.

Baker said Mrs. Armstrong, who was reported under the care of a physician at home yesterday, told him she warned Wilkerson three or four weeks ago that she had sworn out a warrant to keep him away from her.

Promised to Go on Vacation

Wilkerson then reportedly promised to stop drinking, and Thursday he called her from a Silver Spring construction job where he worked as a bulldozer operator.

She met him, according to her account, and found he had been drinking gin and whisky, and had a bottle of wine.

Baker said they sat in a park day after day, the brother said. Today the body may be viewed at Hyson's funeral home, 1300 N. st. nw., between 10 and 11 a. m.

Corporal Becham's immediate family includes his wife, the former Easter Tillett of Kitty Hawk, and her son, Donald, 17, to call police. When Wilkerson heard the police at the door, she told Baker, he declared, "If that's the police, I'll get them."

Womble's report states Becham kicked the door open, and Wilkerson immediately fired a blast at Becham from a 12 gauge single-barreled shotgun, hitting him in the chest. Becham fell back and he and Womble then opened fire.

Mrs. Doris Golden, 20, blonde daughter of Mrs. Armstrong, said Wilkerson "several times" threatened her mother's life and also "threatened my life." She said she warned police at the door Thursday night that Wilkerson had a gun, but they brushed past her.

On several occasions, said Donald Armstrong, he saw Wilkerson with a .38-caliber revolver which "he kept at our house—under the mattress, I think."

Asked by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald if Wilkerson "lived there," Donald said, "No, he came there. He forced his way in."

The shotgun, said Donald, was an old family gun, kept on the back porch.

Similar accounts were given the coroner's jury by a younger brother, Kenneth, 13, and a friend of Donald's, Howard Hubscher, 16, of 1255 Penn st. ne. in the house at the time.

Jailed for Robbery

Mrs. Golden told reporters after the inquest that she is separated from her husband, and that her mother, who is 45 years old, also had been separated from her husband for several years.

Wilkerson had no fixed address. His mother, Mrs. Bertie Wilkerson, lives at 215 Adams st. ne. Wilkerson had appeared in court here on a variety of charges, and served several prison terms in this area for robbery, auto theft and other offenses, with a record back to 1935.

Funeral services are to be held Sunday for Corporal Becham at his birthplace, Kitty Hawk, N. C., one of his brothers, Shelton Becham, said last night.

Burial will also be there on Sunday afternoon, the brother said. Today the body may be viewed at Hyson's funeral home, 1300 N. st. nw., between 10 and 11 a. m.

Guessing Game Is a Matter Of Numbers

Schuyler Wilson, 29, and Walter S. Lephew, 43, both of 2635 21st st. nw., want the United States attorney to make up his mind.

It seems that every time the two defendants come into Municipal Court, the charge against them has been changed.

They were arrested at the 21st st. address on October 5. Seized, police said, were $2000, numbers slips, telephones, adding machines, radios and football pool tickets.

Wilson and Lephew were taken to Police Headquarters, charged with operation of a lottery, possession of numbers slips and setting up a gaming table, and released under $3500 bond.

The next day, they appeared in Municipal Court, to find themselves charged under a warrant for lottery operation only. Bond was reduced to $1000 and the case continued until November 5.

Ex-Rookie Must Give Kilmer Girl Third of Pay

Edmondson, Given Suspended Term,
Will Help Support Victim for 5 Years

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The former rookie policeman who fired the shot that paralyzed Miss Dorothy Kilmer, 19, was sentenced yesterday to help support her for the next five years.

The defendant, Wayne W. Edmondson, 22, of 2210 Shannon pl. se., stood tight-lipped as Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court lectured him for "playing with a loaded gun." But Edmondson obviously was relieved when the judge gave him a 5-to-15-month suspended jail term on condition that he give one third of his net salary to Miss Kilmer for five years.

Edmondson had been on the force but a few months when he and another officer, Roland H. Holifield, 26, paid an off-duty visit to the Palm Grove Club at 1601 14th st. nw. They had been boasting, it was said, when Edmondson began playing with his revolver. Miss Kilmer had warned him to point the weapon elsewhere when it discharged.

Conference to Select Festival Princesses

By Nicha Soure

IT MIGHT be a mite hard to visualize cherry blossoms in bloom and princesses in pastel gowns when Washington is seasawing between rain and sleet with only a smattering of sun. But the Conference of State Society Officers is planning ahead for the day when princesses representing their States will take their place in the annual Cherry Blossom Festival.

At the second quarterly meeting of the conference Monday, Carl Walker, president, accepted the festival chairmanship and appointed Mrs. Stanley C. Hedstrom and Mrs. Kenneth G. Hayden to assist him.

Each State will select its own princess according to its own rules to represent the State. The only general requirement is that she must be representative of the State and be between the ages of 18 and 25. The princesses will be members of the queen's court at the festival.

SHE ARRIVED last night and Montana's glamour queen will be at the dance tonight. She's none other than Miss Patti Luer, the brown-eyed, auburn-haired lass who won the Miss Montana title and was one of the 15 finalists in the annual Miss America beauty contest in Atlantic City.

The talented Montana State University coed will sing several numbers during the dance. Miss Luer, returning to the campus from New York, stopped over in Washington for the dance. In New York she appeared with Miss America, Miss Wyoming, Miss Alabama and Miss Oklahoma in a Twentieth Century-Fox movie short on the Atlantic City pageant. Patti, a mezzo-soprano, sang "O Mio Fernando" from the opera "La Favorita" by Donizetti, in her first movie appearance.

Other pertinent information: the Treasure State's pre-holiday dance will be tonight in the Louis Seize Room of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will begin at 9 p. m. to the music of Dave McWilliams' orchestra.

THAT unique State society official, New York's commuting president, also arrived in Washington yesterday to attend the State's monthly dance. Harold B. Barnett, although now in business in Orlando, Fla., always makes it a point to be in Washington for the New York State Society dances.

Tonight the Columbia University alumni will be special guests, and their colors and music will be featured. The "Columbia night ball" in the Shoreham Hotel will begin with a reception at 8:30 p. m. and dancing at 10 p. m. All New Yorkers and their friends from other States are invited to come and dance to the music of Dave McWilliams' Orchestra. All servicemen in uniform will be admitted free.

DECEMBER 11 is the date of the second dance of the season for West Virginia State Society. Dancing to the music of Dave McWilliams orchestra will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

During the intermission, the new officers of the State Society will be introduced. They are Representative Hubert S. Ellis, president and Executive Vice President Howard M. Starling. Vice presidents representing West Virginia's six Congressional Districts are Mrs. Frances W. Smeltzer, First; David S. Davison, Second; Mrs. Sada C. Shinn, Third; Mr. Starling, Fourth; James P. Moriarty, Fifth, and Representative E. H. Hedrick, Sixth. The historian is Col. Heber H. Rice; Mrs. Smeltzer is acting recording secretary and Mr. and Mrs. Chester E. Barrows are treasurer and financial secretary, respectively.

DON'T forget Georgia State Society's Christmas dance to-night. As an extra reminder: it will be in the west ball room of the Shoreham Hotel with group singing between 9 and 10 p. m. and dancing beginning at 10 p. m.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE SOCIETY, in an effort to get all members before they leave for the Christmas holidays, has slated a preholiday dance on Friday, December 10.

It will be held in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel with Dave McWilliams' Orchestra furnishing the music between 10 p. m. and 1 a. m.

For further information call Michael C. Sullivan, the chairman of the social committee, at Hobart 1900.

ROY HAINES, assistant to Senator Owen Brewster, was elected president of the Maine State Society for an interim term ending next April. Mr. Haines, succeeding Erlon S. Fogg, was elected president at a meeting in the Bellevue Hotel Thursday.

THE Society of Virginia celebrated its founding at the twenty-fifth anniversary ball and reception in the Carlton Hotel Thursday. The charter members, who were guests of honor at the celebration, were introduced to the society preceding President J. W. Rixey Smith's talk.

Glenn Carow played several piano selections during intermission, including his own composition, "Society of Virginia March," in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary.

THE DELAWARE State Society's first dance of the season will be on Saturday, December 11. It will be held in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, with Dave McWilliams' Orchestra offering music from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. The dance will be held jointly with the office of Research and Development Board of the office of the Secretary of Defense.

The recently elected officers of the Delaware State Society are J. Caleb Boggs, president; Edward Willim, Jr., vice president; Miss Elizabeth R. Groves, executive secretary; Mrs. Ashby Williams, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles J. McCloskey, treasurer, and Mrs. Charles A. Henderson, social secretary.

The former social secretary of the society, Mrs. Kenneth G. Hayden, has been named vice chair-

Miss Groves, who has been the Delaware State Society's executive secretary for 30 years, was honored with an orchid, flown from Hollywood, as the "good neighbor of the day" yesterday.

She was given the orchid by the Breakfast in Hollywood program and was heard locally over WMAL. gathering each week 18 shopping bags full of magazines, crossword puzzles and jigsaw puzzles, and taking them to Walter Reed Hospital, Mount Alto and Children's Hospital.

Miss Groves, whose motto is "surprise party by members of others" and "give and it shall be given you," was given an "on the WMAL."

SECRETARY OF LABOR MAURICE TOBIN (left) obtains the latest British production figures from Margaret Bondfield, first British woman to hold the rank of Cabinet Minister. The former Labor Minister and the Secretary of Labor met yesterday when Miss Bondfield addressed a group of employees in the U. S. Labor Department. Following the closed session, she met the press in a conference. At the earlier meeting she was introduced by Secretary Tobin. Miss Frieda Miller, Chief of the Woman's Bureau, presented the veteran labor leader to reporters at the news conference.

Former British Labor Minister Here

Miss Bondfield Defends British Labor

By Genevieve Reynolds

JOHN L. LEWIS' accusation that the British miners are fighting modernization of machinery and increased production was termed a "half truth" yesterday by the Right Hon. Margaret Bondfield, 1929 Minister of Labor and the first woman in her country to become a cabinet minister. At the same time she predicted the nationalization of the steel industry on the island.

The alert 70-plus-year-old labor pioneer and former member of Parliament told a group of reporters at a press conference sponsored by the United States Department of Labor, "the question of nationalizing the steel industry is not new. It has been put before the British people for 20 years." Elaborating on Lewis' statement concerning the British miners, she explained: "In some of the pits the old-time miners regard their jobs as a sort of family inheritance—grandfather to father to son—and don't look too favorably on new machinery. Many of the old-timers are dying off—nature is dealing gently with them."

Silver-haired, youngish-looking Miss Bondfield came to this country on a lecture tour under the auspices of the British Information Services. Recently she was made a Companion of Honour, a distinction she shares with former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who in 1930 personally conferred upon her an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the University of Bristol. At that time Mr. Churchill was Chancellor of the University.

First person to address the Women's National Press Club here, she will again be at the head table when the club holds its weekly luncheon, Tuesday, December 7, at 12:30 p. m., in the Mayflower Hotel.

With David Lillenthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, as guest speaker. It was Miss Bondfield who inaugurated the custom of press club luncheons when she addressed the club 29 years ago during the presidency of Lily Lykes Shepard.

Everything for Production

EMPHASIZING that new mechanization of industry and mines is taking place each week, Miss Bondfield declared that many miners are doing everything possible to stimulate production.

"Our miners are being educated to the importance of coal not only in Great Britain but throughout the world," she explained. "They are beginning to see it in terms of world recovery as well as in increased home production."

When asked if a new World Federation Trade Union has been formed yet, Miss Bondfield replied, "No. Plans are in a state of suspended animation."

She went on to point out that nothing had been done because of the unreasonableness of the Communist Party, and that the WFTU had suspended itself because of the Communist "tack."

Denying that Communists are strong in the British labor movement, she declared, "The Trade Union's experience with them in 1922 alerted labor. Lying is part of the Communists' technique to gain their ends. Right there you get a fundamental cleavage because we don't believe in that method."

Miss Bondfield, who was born in a humble cottage at Chard, Somerset, in 1873, the tenth of 11 children and worked herself to the top of trade unions and labor, said that Great Britain now has full employment. "Of the approximately 23 million workers, between 10 and 12 million are women," she commented, adding, "Women who worked in wartime industries have returned in large numbers. Greatest proportion returned for patriotic reasons but, of course, some like the extra money in their pockets."

Pay Not Equal—Yet

BUT WHEN it comes to equal pay for equal work, "alas British women don't have it," said Miss Bondfield. "It's coming slowly."

A larger number of British women of World War II period than of post-World War I era will want to go home and have families, she observed. "In fact, there has been almost a revolution amongst our women who want to return home and have families since World War II," asserted the world-renowned former labor leader.

Many educated British women now hold part-time jobs in industry, according to Miss Bondfield. "I always believed that we had the best politically educated women in the world," she maintained. "Now we will have a much better educated set of householders, for the overwhelming majority have joined some sort of voluntary organization such as the YWCA, Federation of Women's Institutes, (rural women), Business and Professional Women's Clubs."

Pleasant Election Shock

REFERRING to the presidential elections, she said with a chuckle, "After having schooled myself for the other, the American election was a pleasant shock."

"Anything can happen now on the Continent," she added in a more serious tone, and "we will have to be able to meet it."

On the strength of the American election she predicted that the present British government has an overwhelming chance of being re-elected.

What Stalin said to Eisenhower at Lenin's Tomb

NO OTHER foreigner had ever set foot on that sacred spot, but nothing was too good for "Ike" on his post-victory visit to Moscow. Invited to view a Red army parade with Stalin, Eisenhower made mental notes on the conversation. What were the Generalissimo's surprising comments about Russia's need for American know-how... the power he thought should be given official delegates... the rebuke he had once radioed to General Marshall? You'll read it in Sunday's installment of Eisenhower's own story, "Crusade in Europe." Section II.

HAVE you thought about giving a cloudproof compact to one of your darlings for Christmas? The Rex Compact Co. has developed a triple-door arrangement which they say prevents the powder from beclouding the mirror and dusting the inside of your purse, no matter how much shaking around it gets. The secret lies in a vinylite tire, which hermetically seals powder under the third door. The elastic plastic ring is odorless.

A lipstick holder is attached with a short length of fine chain and detachable clasp. Empty when you buy it, the holder will fit lipstick containers of Revlon, Elizabeth Arden, Harriet Hubbard Ayer, Helena Rubenstein, Houligant and others.

A flat 3 1/2-inch circle, the "Tripledoor" comes in a gold or silver finish with floral or geometric designs to choose from. Available in Washington at the Hecht Co.

comes in a small faille poke with drawstrings. The bag, which comes in several colors, is large enough to accommodate a lipstick or other emergency repair item as well as comb and brush, but small enough to tuck in the pocket of a ski suit.

A product of the Owens Brush Co., "Vanity Poke" is expected to be available to department stores and drugstores sometime soon.

Where to Find Small Washers

Can you tell me if there is, on the market, a washing machine which holds 4 or 5 pounds of clothes?
R. S. G.

Yes, there are several washers of this type on the market. You would be able to look them over in the electrical appliance sections of department stores, as well as in regular home appliance stores.

Regarding a recent letter about where to send clothes for needy Indians, St. Joseph's Indian School, Chamberlain, S. Dak., would appreciate used clothing and shoes for its Indian children. They use old evening dresses for costumes for plays and would especially like old Christmas tree decorations and materials which can be used in making such decorations.
A FRIEND.

Is there any place in Washington where we may purchase picture frame molding and colored mats so that we may frame several prints, doing the work ourselves?
C. K.

Some of the firms listed under "Picture Frames" in the yellow section of the telephone book sell molding for use in making frames at home. One of these can be reached by telephoning District 3505. Material for mats can be purchased at stores listed under "Artists' Supplies" in the yellow book.

Do you know of any classes or hobby groups in Washington where I could learn to paint on fabric?
G. F. W.

A local shop which will start a textile painting class shortly after Christmas can be reached by telephoning Dupont 6607.

Is there any place in Washington where I can purchase hand puppets or string puppets? That is all my son wants for Christmas and I would like so much to be able to get him a few.
W. N. B.

A shop that sells hand puppets can be reached by calling Executive 7405. String puppets can also be ordered through this shop, though this type of puppet is usually quite expensive.

Can you print a recipe for meat-filled ravioli, giving full directions for the handling of the paste?
O. L. R.

Directions for making ravioli, as given in "The Joy of Cooking," by Irma S. Rombauer (Bobbs Merrill), follows:

Ravioli
Sift onto a board:
1½ cups flour
1½ teaspoon salt
Drop into the center:
1 whole egg
2 egg yolks

Moisten these ingredients lightly with warm water and knead into a stiff, smooth dough. Cover it with a cloth and permit it to stand for 10 minutes. Roll the dough until it is very thin. Cut it into two sheets. On one sheet put a teaspoonful of ravioli mixture (see below) in little mounds 2 inches apart. Cover them with the second sheet, which may be brushed lightly with water. Press the top sheet gently around the ravioli mounds. Press the edges. Cut the dough into squares with a mound in each center. Use a pie jagger or a cookie cutter. Dry the ravioli for about two hours, then drop them into boiling, salted water (or into chicken broth). Simmer them for 10 minutes. Remove them from the liquid with a skimmer onto a hot platter. Sprinkle them with grated Parmesan Cheese. Serve with sauce or roast gravy.

Ravioli Filling
This is usually a spinach and meat mixture, very finely chopped or put through a puree strainer. Grated cheese and light seasoning

PETUNIA!

Bishop-Stracken

may be added. Sometimes the filling is thickened slightly with bread crumbs or egg. There may be much leeway in the composition of the filling and you may use any combination of meat and vegetables you like. Here are two suggestions:

¼ cup cooked pureed spinach
¼ cup chopped cooked meat
1 egg
2 tablespoons cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons grated cheese
½ clove garlic, minced (optional)
Stock, cream, or gravy to form stiff paste

Seasoning Or:
½ cup cooked, drained spinach
½ cup cooked, minced chicken
2 tablespoons grated cheese
½ clove garlic, minced (optional)
Salt
Pepper
½ teaspoon dried basil or ¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Ravioli Sauce
Melt 2 tablespoons butter
Stir in 2 tablespoons flour
Combine and stir in 4 tablespoons tomato paste, 1½ cups water Stir and cook the sauce until it bubbles.

To R. J. R.: Several readers have suggested additional places to find suction cups. W. T. advises that a rubber goods shop on H st., n.w., between 14th and 15th, carries suction cups in various sizes with a screw attached which could be screwed onto the luggage rack if you wish. W. P. Y. writes that she purchased some double suction cups at a baby shop at the corner of 9th and H, n.e. The top suction cup is 2¾ inches in diameter, and the bottom cup 4¾ inches.

18th Century Revived in Music Rooms

Music of the eighteenth century was celebrated in the Library of Congress last night and in the music room of Dumbarton Oaks.

In Harvard University's Georgetown estate, Alexander Schneider directed a program including a Haydn symphony, Handel concerto, and Mozart divertimento. There, a chamber orchestra of two horns, oboe, flute, and strings delivered a completely engaging account of these masters.

Among the great glories of Handel's music is his writing for oboe. Under Mitchell Miller's ministrations, the solo line in Handel's concerto grosso in G minor became one of the most perfect expressions imaginable. His tone, phrasing, and complete mastery of the entire score makes his work unique today. Schneider seconded him with sensitive support, playing first violin at the same time.

This musical assignment continued in both Mozart and Handel. It would be easier for the players if they had a conductor directing with baton, but Schneider's conception of the music is sound and persuasive and much can be said in support of his practice.

The Haydn symphony called "Matin" dates from the composer's twenty-ninth year, and is sixth of his more than 100 symphonies. It abounds with imagery with pizzicato passages for the strings, and a bassoon part is sheer wizardry. That we should live so long without knowing such music is shameful. Both the Haydn and the Mozart abound in a light-hearted quality that would enliven any symphony program today.

At the Library of Congress an ensemble still new to concert platforms appeared. The Bach Aria Group, now in its second season, has been preparing itself for almost three years. It is composed of four singers and five instrumentalists, flute, oboe, violin, cello and piano. Unfortunately the piano rarely meets the needs of Bach's music in these accompaniments as well as a harpsichord.

The aims of this group are truly wonderful. We hope they will prosper economically as well as artistically. You, the reader, may help by informing your Washington radio station that now carries the group for 15 minutes on Sunday mornings that you would like to hear more of them.

Their performances are almost always beautiful, and the music is unrivaled in its way. They are wise to mix passages from the secular cantatas with those of sacred nature. Bach was a remarkably versatile man who loved to express joys and sorrows in either worldly or heavenly ways. Robert Bloom's oboe, Bernard Greenhouse's cello, and Jean Carlton's soprano stood out in last night's program. All told, it was a great night for music in Washington.

Cranberry Confection

An usual fruit confection to make at home for Christmas is candied cranberries, cookery scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture say. The candied berries are Christmas-red, bright, plump and semitransparent so that they may be used either as a sweetener or garnish. They are easy to make, but take time because the secret of their success is long slow heating and overnight standing in sirup.

The recipe calls for: 1 quart (pound) of large cranberries; 3 cups sugar; 2 cups water. To make: Pick over and wash the berries. Sift each berry in several places with the point of a sharp knife. Use a large shallow saucepan—wide enough so that all the berries can float on top of the sirup. Heat sugar and water in the pan until the sugar is dissolved. Then cool and add the berries. Bring slowly just up to the boiling point, then remove immediately from the heat and let stand overnight. Do not let the berries boil because this breaks the skin.

The next day remove the berries and boil the sirup 5 to 10 minutes to concentrate and make it thicker. (If you have a candy thermometer, boil the sirup to 220 Fahrenheit). Cool the sirup, put the berries back in it, heat slowly and cook gently 3 or 4 minutes. Remove from the heat and allow the berries to stand in the sirup 2 hours or more. Then heat slowly for the third time just 5 minutes. Remove from the heat and let the berries stand in the sirup overnight again.

On the third day warm sirup and berries until the sirup will pour easily. Drain sirup from berries. Spread berries to dry on a rack covered with cheesecloth. When dry, they may be stored in a tightly covered jar. If desired, they may be rolled in sugar. The leftover sirup makes a good dessert sauce or may be used in holiday punch.

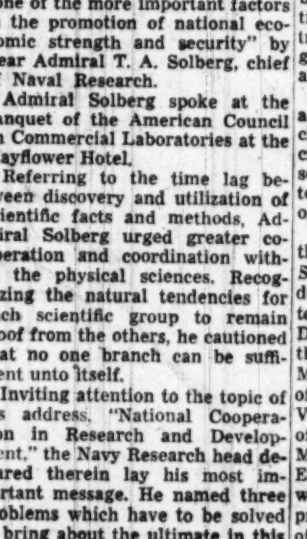

Know the Eggs You Buy

To help the homemaker know the eggs she buys, poultry marketing specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have prepared a picture chart in colors which shows the different weight classes of eggs (sizes) and also the differences in quality of grades according to United States standards. This chart for consumers is small enough to tack on a kitchen wall or door where the homemaker can consult it at a glance before she goes to market and also when she cooks eggs.

The colored photographs of eggs when broken out of the shell and also after poaching and frying show why Grade AA and A eggs are especially desirable for these two methods of cooking. For general cooking, however, the less expensive Grade B or C eggs may be used to advantage.

Single copies of the chart "Know the Eggs You Buy" plus a folder on buying and keeping eggs may be had free by addressing a postcard request to: Production and Marketing Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

Testimony Hit

Jesse Jones Called a Liar Or Forgetful

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Jesse H. Jones, former Reconstruction Finance Corporation head, today was accused in Federal Court of "deliberately lying or displaying a memory a lot worse than anybody has been led to believe."

The accusation was made by William Power Maloney, attorney for James A. Moffett, former Federal Housing administrator and oil operator.

Moffett is suing the Arabian-American Oil Co. for six million dollars for alleged services in negotiating an arrangement whereby the British government underwrote the government of Saudi Arabia in the war.

Maloney appeared before Federal Judge Samuel Kaufman to oppose dismissal of a subpoena served on Jones as a witness in the trial, scheduled to begin January 10.

Referring to testimony given by Jones in depositions in the Moffett case last week, Maloney declared:

"I maintain that no jury of intelligent people will believe one word in that deposition. He is either deliberately lying or his memory is a lot worse than anybody has been led to suspect up to now and under those circumstances, I want the jury to get a look at him."

Jones, who is 74, was ordered to appear before Judge Kaufman for the depositions, after Jones stated he could not testify orally because of a heart ailment. Moffett had countered with an affidavit that the former RFC head played poker at a club until 2 a. m. the day the affidavit on his ailment was submitted.

Counsel for Jones sought to void the subpoena served on Jones on the ground it was served improperly.

Judge Kaufman gave both sides until December 11 to file supporting papers on the dismissal of the subpoena.

Moffett contends he saved the Arabian-American firm 30 million dollars and helped it make profits of many additional millions.

In his oral testimony and depositions, Jones denied any knowledge of the alleged negotiations in which Moffett said he participated.

Kaiser-Frazer Buys Plant

Detroit, Dec. 3 (AP).—Kaiser-Frazer Corp. announced today it is buying for $15,000,000 the famous Government-owned former Willow Run bomber plant.

It cost the Government 100 million dollars to build the factory, according to unofficial figures.

As leaseholder, Kaiser-Frazer has been manufacturing automobiles in the plant since taking occupancy after the war's end.

K-F said it is buying the plant from the Government on a 20-year installment plan.

In Washington, WAA confirmed the sale but had no further details. The airport and airfield, some equipment and other parts of the huge industrial area have been taken over by the University of Michigan and others, a WAA spokesman said.

Nauseating Fumes Still Over Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Dec. 3 (AP).—Fumes which made a number of persons ill hung over a wide area northeast of Philadelphia last night and early today.

Police stations throughout the Bucks County area were swamped with calls from worried residents who reported feeling nauseated. Most of those ill were children.

County Health Officer Theodore Staudenmayer, Langhorne, Pa., said he believed the fumes came from an industrial plant along the Delaware River just north of Philadelphia.

Research and Development Cooperation Held Vital

Cooperation in research and development was termed last night "one of the more important factors in the promotion of national economic strength and security" by Rear Admiral T. A. Solberg, chief of Naval Research.

Admiral Solberg spoke at the banquet of the American Council on Commercial Laboratories at the Mayflower Hotel.

Referring to the time lag between discovery and utilization of scientific facts and methods, Admiral Solberg urged greater cooperation and coordination with the physical sciences. Recognizing the natural tendencies for each scientific group to remain aloof from the others, he cautioned that no one branch can be sufficient unto itself.

Inviting attention to the topic of his address, "National Cooperation in Research and Development," the Navy Research head declared therein lay his most important message. He named three problems which have to be solved to bring about the ultimate in this cooperation. They were:

- (1) Collaboration between scientists not only in special fields but in related fields.
 - (2) Cooperation between universities, industry and the Government.
 - (3) Integration of research, development and production.
- To solve these problems, he advised: (1) Dissemination and exchange of information. (2) Investigation in the support of basic research in universities and other technical institutions. (3) Exchange of personnel.
- Among guests introduced from the speaker's table were John R. Steelman, assistant to the President; Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the Bureau of Standards; Dr. A. N. Richards, president of the National Academy of Sciences; Maj. Gen. Alden H. Walth, chief of the Chemical Corps of the Army; Vice Admiral A. C. Miles, chief of Navy Materials, and Dr. Walter Murphy, editor of Chemical Engineering News. Introductions were made by Dr. Bernard L. Oser, president of the American Council of Commercial Laboratories, who presided.

Glib Fugitive Leaves During Laundry Task

Robert Kamlager, a resourceful runaway with a glib tongue, is traveling again.

Police reported yesterday that the 16-year-old boy, who first made the news here November 12 when he falsely reported he was robbed, ran away from the Receiving Home last Sunday. He was hanging out laundry, when all of a sudden he fled.

Dr. William H. Stavaks, superintendent of the Receiving Home, said that several days before that Robert had told some other boys at the home he was going to head for Cincinnati.

Back in November, Robert with much imagination, reported he had come back from Alaska and had been robbed of all his money by several men while they were driving toward Mount Vernon. He said he was on a sightseeing trip.

Under further questioning the boy changed his story, and told police he had run away from home because his father was cruel to him. His third story—the one police say is true—was that he had escaped from the Wisconsin School for Boys at Waukesha in September and had traveled around the East doing odd jobs.

The boy was being held at the Receiving Home pending authorization to return him there. The authorization arrived Monday, the day after he ran away.

Six Children Killed

In Wisconsin Fire

Oshkosh, Wis., Dec. 3 (AP).—Six small children died in a fire which destroyed their home last night. The fire struck the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Carpenter shortly before midnight. Police said Carpenter told them an oil heater ignited the kitchen and he was prevented by flames from reaching the bedroom where the children were sleeping. Mrs. Carpenter was at work.

The dead were Rose Mary, 7; Charlotte, 5; Russell, 4; Kenneth, 3; Barbara, 2; and Sandra, 4 months.

SAUNDERS MOTORS.

Portraits
By James J. Metcalfe

When We Are Old
When you and I are old,
I hope . . . That we shall be together . . . To share the wonders of this world . . . In every kind of weather . . . I pray that we shall sit before . . .
The same inviting fire . . .
With all the golden memories
Of days that lovers could desire
And if my hair is gray
And yours . . . Reflects a silvery beauty . . . May both of them be evidence . . . That we full-filled our duty . . . May there be nothing tragic or . . . In any way distressing . . . But may we both belong to God . . .
And gain His every blessing . . .
I hope our partnership will bear . . . The fruit of each endeavor . . . And you will be with me, my love . . . Forever and forever.

"A nurse approached George and said he could see his wife.

"My wife," says George, "is in that room. I've been with her."

"Oh, no," says the nurse, "your wife is in the delivery room."

They Make the Motors Too Quiet These Days

J. G. M. of 4627 S. 36th st., Arlington, Va., was bedded for the movies the other night, and was walking along E. st. nw., between 13th and 14th.

Parked at the curb, he noticed a 1941 Dodge convertible. The lights were off, the doors were locked—but the motor was running.

"That's curious," he thought. "I've seen 'em go away and forget to turn off their lights, but never the motor."

Returning from the movies, he walked past the same spot, to see what had happened to the car with the running motor.

It was gone. But in almost the same spot was a 1941 Hudson, lights off, doors locked—but with the motor running.

SHIP OF STATE

Democracy appears to be a whole lot like a raft: Quite simple in construction, but a most seaworthy craft.

Although each plank is durable some folks don't seem to think it; Until they climb aboard and find how hard it is to sink it.

G. A. Fisher, 1442 Spring rd. nw.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

"Ah," sighed the divorcee as she got her final decree, "I feel like a new man again."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill: Because my first name is Roma, my husband has been kidding

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

me about the baby elephant named Roma.

If he doesn't stop his teasing, will you list him for me in your Give-Away section? R. R. T., 4763 N. 1st st., Arlington, Va.

Dear Roma:

The Washington Post regrets that, because of space limitations, it cannot undertake to list husbands in the Give-Aways.

Besides, it wouldn't be fair to do it for one and not another—and I've already declined to run such an item for my own wife, who had the same idea. Bill.

P. S. I keep telling her "Good husbands don't grow on trees," and she keeps answering: "You're telling me!"

PERSONAL NOTES

Barbara Chosch, 9 Russell rd., Alexandria, Va.: Back issues of The Washington Post are kept at the counter in our lobby for 30 days. Beyond that, you can usually get them from our Circulation Department, 4th floor, National Theater Building. If you're not sure which day's issue you want, you can check a bound file of back issues in our lobby, or in any library which keeps newspaper files.

MISCELLANY

A recent news story told of a railroad train that was stuck in snow drifts, and then added: "A snow plow from Cimarron freed the fast train around midnight." A couple of eagle-eyed Arlington readers (who are known to their friends as Mess and Bac) wonder just which meaning of the word "fast" was intended in that dispatch. Roy Poss of 44 Farragut pl. nw. complains that it seems to him that Capital Transit service is worse since the raise in rates. Which reminds me of the old gag "Do married men live longer?" and the answer "No, it just seems longer." The Ladies Aid group at the Trinity Lutheran Church (30th and Bunker Hill rd., Mount Rainier, Md.) will hold a bazaar and turkey dinner from 5:30 to 8:30 this evening. And the Junior Division of the National Council of Jewish Women is sponsoring a dance in the Burgundy Room of the Wardman Park Hotel tonight (10 p. m. to 1 a. m.) with proceeds to be used for the council's philanthropic activities. Organist Dean Thomas, violinist Lucius Kingman and soprano Ruth Nicholson will give a recital at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the District Heights Neighborhood Church. Mrs. Shirley R. Bulka of RFD 1, Box 510, Alexandria, Va., says that now that we've made a big fuss about the auto dealers, how about investigating the apartment house owners who have "closed" waiting lists a mile long? E. L. W. writes from Baltimore that he worked out our "Wishing Well" puzzle the other day and found that the answer for his name (Edward) was "A Delivery." That same afternoon, the stork checked in with a brand new daughter.

UNEASY PAYMENTS

Forehanded folks use the lay-away plan in purchasing their Christmas presents. The rest of us say "charge it," and then use the lay-away-nights-worrying plan.

WILL YOU HELP?

Another policeman has lost his life in line of duty, and as I write these lines it appears likely that a fund will be raised for his family.

I hope that District Liners will respond as generously as they have in the past.

Our money can't bring back the dead, but it can help to ease the lot of the living.

NEW YORK.—During a discussion of the feelings of defeated presidential candidates, Charles Hand of the U. S. Lines told of his good friend, Al Smith. When Smith was legislative leader in Albany there were 76 Democratic votes—exactly enough to carry any motion. A colleague named Graubard introduced a bill to protect the pushcart peddlers, who were his constituents. "You'll get my full support," Smith promised him. But instead of the 76 votes with Smith controlled, the bill got only two votes—Smith's and Graubard's. The day after Smith was defeated for the Presidency in 1928, he received the wire he later treasured: "The people were for you like you were for my pushcart—Graubard."

The Kelsley Press of Great Britain is offering, for syndication in North America free of charge, the book review criticizing General Eisenhower's book and lauding Field Marshal Montgomery. If there is a coalition in China, Mme. Sun Yat-sen will emerge again. Gertrude Lawrence's London opening in Daphne du Maurier's "September Tide" will be the swankiest in years. It will be attended by those members of the royal family who are not incapacitated.

Russel Crouse transacted three pieces of business yesterday. He took his baby's carriage to a carpenter to have a wheel repaired, bought more of the gay-colored shorts he wears, and also purchased a large estate in Cape Ann, Mass.—a summer estate which once caught the fancy of William Howard Taft. Crouse, coauthor of "Life With Mother," "Life With Father," "State of the Union" and other hits, was a columnist for the New York Post and still is on leave of absence. He first became interested in the theater when he interviewed Winchell Smith, the playwright, and learned that Smith never rises before noon and always wears loud-colored shorts. "Any business which enables a man to get up at 12, and wear such shorts," Crouse decided, "is for me."

John Jacob Astor recently bought a farm in Basking Ridge, N. J., where he has introduced some extraordinary novelties in farm life. Although American vessels are transporting cattle to Europe, Astor decided that the cattle he preferred were to come from Switzerland. The farm had 30 cows and two bulls. Astor felt that this was not a satisfactory ratio, and that the disproportion needed correction. For his 30 cows, therefore, he now has 10 bulls.
